Israeli Trial Of Most Bloodthirsty Nazi Killer, Monster Chief Of Gestapo Jewish Section, Will Yield Enough Evidence To Net Other Quarry

Adolf Heinz Beckerle, Nazi Police Chief of Frankfurt from 1933 to 1941, who was rearrested on murder charges, is accused of complicity in the deaths in the Treblinka concentration camp of 11,000 to 12,000 Greek Jews from Macedonia and Thrace.

Beckerle was Hitler's diplomatic representative in Sofia during World War II when Thrace and Macedonia were made part of Bulgaria, says the New York Times. Beckerle is the second former Nazi to be rearrested by the West Germans in the wake of Eichmann's capture. Hermann Krumey, a former S. S. officer and one of Eichmann's chief assistants, was taken into custody again.

Fritz Bauer, Chief Prosecutor of the State of Hesse, predicted that more arrests would follow in West Germany in the expectation that Eichmann's trial would provide the necessary evidence to imprison many of his pre-war and wartime associates. Both Beckerle and Krumey had been released after previous arrests for lack of evidence.

Beckerle was Frankfurt's police chief from 1933 to 1941. He was seized by the Russians in Sofia and was held prisoner by them until 1955, when he was returned to Germany.

The Treblinka camp in Poland, where Jews deported from Thrace and Macedonia were gassed or shot to death, had been organized by Eichmann, Herr Bauer said. The prosecutor said he would go to Israel to discover what he could about Eichmann and his past activities. "We will be very happy if Eichmann tells a great deal," he declared.

In contrast to the Federal Government, which said it would not ask for the extradition of Eichmann, Herr Bauer suggested that extradition should be requested, if only as a demonstration of Germany's good intentions to "overcome the past." There is no extradition agreement between West Germany and Israel, which do not maintain diplomatic relations with each other.

The evidence that the German prosecutor has against Eichmann shows according to the New York Times, that, among other things, the former S. S. leader had 150 Jews murdered in the Auschwitz concentration camp for the single purpose of obtaining a collection of skeletons for the German university at Strasbourg, France.

Jewish sources in Buenos Aires said that Eichmann was secretly removed from Argentina aboard a special plane that had brought Israel's delegation to the Argentine Independence Day ceremonies.

Abba Eban, Israeli Minister of State who led the delegation to the ceremonies, said: "I know nothing about it." Mr. Eban arrived in a special plane of Israel's El Al Airline. Asked whether the plane is still in Argentina, he said: "I don't know."

When former Nazi executioner Adolf Eichmann was captured abroad recently by Israeli secret service agents, he realized at once that he was the prisoner of professionals, says the New York Herald Tribune. He realized that escape was impossible, and he made no attempt to hide his identity.

The operatives did not accuse him of being Eichmann, whom the Israelis charge with having played a leading role in the killing of 6,000,000 Jews in World War II. They merely asked him in German: "Who are you?" The reply from the man who knew he had reached the end of hiding was: "Ich bin (I am) Adolf Eichmann."

Two senior officers of the Israeli security services — who can be identified only as a gray-haired man and his dark-haired associate — permitted themselves a tiny smile of triumph as they related this story to Alvin Rosenfeld in Tel Aviv.

In a partial disclosure of the security apparatus' work and administrative set-up, the two men said there actually are two Israeli secret organizations, but that their work is co-ordinated. The first is the General Security Agency, attached to the Defense Ministry and resembling somewhat Britain's famed MI-5.

It works solely within Israel and engages in counter-espionage, counter-subversion, and counter-intelligence. It guards against the danger of a fifth column and combats spies in a country surrounded by sworn enemies. Its tasks also include the preservation of Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion's personal safety.

The second outfit, the Central Intelligence and Security Agency, is attached to the Prime Minister's office and is vaguely similar to the American C.I.A. It handles all jobs abroad which further the country's interests, but which can only be carried out in a clandestine manner. Its agents engage in espionage in widely separated countries.

The C. I. S. A. head also represents the "entire security community" in its relationships with the government and Mr. Ben-Gurion. The C. I. S. A. head has direct access to the Prime Minister-Defense Minister and co-ordinates the work of the two agencies.

This striking inter-agency co-operation, so unlike the situation in some countries where security outfits spend much time fighting one another, is reportedly based only in part in the co-ordination role of the C. I. S. A. head, says the New York Herald Tribune. Other proffered reasons: Israeli patriotism and the "comradeship" of operatives sharing a sense of values and ideology in a pioneering country.

Both organizations are outgrowths of S. H. A. I., the intelligence arm of the pre-statehood Haganah underground. S. H. A. I. was a slap-dash, informal, and daredevil kind of outfit, but it provided a basis for building a governmental security system upon the state's foundation twelve years ago.

No international colleges for secret agents exist. The new services learned by trial and error. They also got tips from the study of memoirs of retired secret agents and the histories and documents of other secret services. Did detective stories help? "No, but some of the memoirs read like detective stories."

The first members of the apparatus came from these sources: The old S. H. A. I. the various underground movements that fought the British and Arabs before statehood; the undergrounds that smuggled Jews past various guarded borders and into Palestine despite the British blockade, and post-statehood immigrants who had struggled abroad for the state's creation.

Recruits are spotted while in school or the army. Today, the security services run two schools jointly, one for recruits and the other a refresher school for operatives with at least two years of experience. The new services modeled themselves, the dark-haired man said, on the security bodies of "the most civilized democratic countries." He stressed that the Israeli services are based on "the rule of law."

They are under the direct control of Mr. Ben-Gurion, who has said that security services are unfortunate necessities in every country. Budgets are approved in secret session by the Finance and Security Committees of the Knesset (Parliament). Administration — in so far as security permits — is checked by the state controller's office.

The operatives have no power of arrest, says the New York Herald Tribune. As in Britain, a police "special branch" is informed when, say, a spy suspect is found. Only the police may arrest such a man. Thus Eichmann, while brought to Israel by security operatives, was turned over to the police.

Eichmann was arraigned in a closed court in Jaffa before an Israeli magistrate. He was told he was charged with causing the deaths of 6,000,000 Jews and advised he could have a lawyer to defend himself.

The chief of Israel's security services told newspaper men that the drive to get Eichmann to Israel was carried out by Israeli agents alone.

Eichmann's Israeli captor was identified as Tuvia Friedmann, director of the Nazi War Crimes Documentary Center in Haifa, it was reported in New York.

Identification was made on the Mutual Radio Network's "The World Today" program by Benjamin Epstein, national director of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith in New York.

Mr. Epstein, quoting a report from the "National Jewish Monthly" of January, 1960, written by Israeli newspaper man Leo Heiman, said Mr. Friedmann first became aware of Eichmann's presence in the Middle East from information sent out last year by the West German authorities and by Interpol. He said they had traced Eichmann, an oil engineer before he became a Nazi anti-Jewish leader, to a job with a British oil firm in the Sheikdom of Kuwait.

"Earlier this year," Mr. Epstein continued, "Friedmann learned that Eichmann had done a complete plastic surgery job on his face, and burned all papers that might lead to his past. Then, he had quietly slipped into Israel.

"Eichmann was quite fond of women — had several mistresses, in fact. Friedmann got in touch with one of them — who fortunately had the only remaining picture of Eichmann as he looked today, says the New York Herald Tribune. With this photo and the tip from her about possible places where he could be found, it was only a matter of days until the Israel security police caught up with him."

When Premier David Ben-Gurion announced the capture of Eichmann to the Parliament he said: "I have to inform the Knesset that a short time ago one of the greatest of the Nazi war criminals, Adolf Eichmann, who was responsible together with the Nazi leaders for what they called the final solution of the Jewish question, that is the extermination of 6,000,000 of the Jews of Europe, was discovered by the Israel security services."

Eichmann was captured through the efforts of Israeli agents alone, and no foreign officials had been bribed into cooperating with the Israeli agents nor would any money be passed to them in the future, according to Israeli security officials. Justice Minister Pinhas Rosen said Eichmann was held without charge under a magistrate's warrant issued in Jaffa.

Eichmann disappeared in 1945 in Czechoslovakia ahead of advancing United States and Soviet troops, says the New York Times. Jewish units had been searching for him with the help of former S. S. officers since the end of the war.

There were rumors last November that Eichmann was in Kuwait. A question was asked in December in the Knesset as to what the Government was doing about his apprehension. Mr. Rosen said steps were being taken that would only be jeopardized by further questioning.

Mr. Rosen said that Eichmann was undoubtedly wanted by a number of countries that had been occupied by the Germans.

"We will consider extradition only when we are through with him," he said.

Mr. Rosen said that in due time Eichmann would be furnished defense counsel. He said the lawyer might be brought from abroad to avoid charges of prejudice.

Asked if there was enough evidence to indict Eichmann and try him, Mr. Rosen said:

"Yes, definitely. There is sufficient proof. We are also getting witnesses together."

The applicable law, passed in 1950, states:

"A person who has committed * * * during the period of the Nazi regime, in an enemy country, an act constituting a crime against the Jewish people * * * is liable to the death penalty."

Eichmann will be the first to be tried under this provision. There have been death sentences passed in Israel, but none has been carried out, says the New York Times. Eichmann, who is 53 years old, is apparently fit and has admitted his identity, according to Josef Nahmias, Inspector General of the police. He said that Eichmann had not asked for consular help. West German interests in Israel are represented by the British Consulate in Haifa.

At least part of the trial is expected to be conducted in secret because of the secret nature of Eichmann's capture.

Evidence is being assembled in preparation for the trial of Eichmann. One highly placed legal authority suggested that the trial might not come until next year.

The authority explained that Eichmann would find it difficult to find witnesses to testify on his behalf. It is not likely that Israel will grant safe passage to any of Eichmann's old friends or colleagues who might want to testify.

If any were to come to Israel, the authority said, they would be investigated to determine the extent of their involvement in any crimes against Jews. Whatever their citizenship, they could be tried in Israel.

The Israeli law on Nazi crimes against Jews is retroactive.

Eichmann vanished from sight in the days when Hitler's Reich was crumbling under Allied blows. A lieutenant colonel in the S.S. (Elite Guard), he confided to fellow S.S. men he was going underground, says the New York Herald Tribune. He was reported thereafter in several Latin American countries, in Australia, in Switzerland and last October in Kuwait, the British protectorate in the Middle East. The British hunted for him in vain.

West Germany also wanted him. A warrant for murder had been circulated for Eichmann for years. Last year, German authorities dealing with war crimes got a report he might be in Israel and asked Israeli officials to look for him.

Born in Germany, Eichmann moved to Austria and there joined the Nazis in 1932, six years before Hitler took over the country. Eichmann supervised the deportation of Jews from Austria and Czechoslovakia before the Nazis intrusted him with his biggest job.

In 1941 he was named head of an office in the State Security service charged with "the solution of the Jewish question" — the liquidation of millions of Jews. This office bore his name — Dienstelle Eichmann (Eichmann Authority). He is accused of personally supervising the liquidation of the Jews in Budapest.

Eichmann was regarded as the Nazis' Lord High Executioner of Jews and was said to have taken personal "credit" for butchering at least 5,000,000 of them, says the New York Herald Tribune. At the Nuernberg war crime trials in 1946, Dieter Wisliceny, a Gestapo specialist on Jewish affairs, testified that the man directly in charge of carrying out the plan to exterminate Jews was Eichmann, chief of the Gestapo Jewish section.

Wisliceny testified that when Eichmann showed him the Hitler order calling for the extermination of Jews, he (Wisliceny) said to Eichmann: "God grant that our enemies may never have an opportunity to do anything like that to the German people."

"Don't be a sentimentalist," Eichmann reported sharply, according to the witness.

Wisliceny also testified that shortly before the war ended Eichmann told him that he (Eichmann) would commit suicide if Germany lost, adding "cynically" that he would laughingly meet his end, because the thought that he had 5,000,000 Jews on his conscience was particularly rejoicing to him.

An affidavit submitted at these trials two weeks before Wisliceny testified came from an S. S. (Elite Guard) major, in which the major swore that figures on Jewish deaths had been compiled by Eichmann at the express request of Gestapo chief Heinrich Himmler. In August, 1944, Eichmann expressed his fear that the war was lost and that he would be considered a major criminal.

"On the basis of his (Eichmann's) information," the affidavit said, "he had obtained the following results: Approximately 4,000,000 Jews had been killed in the various extermination camps, while an additional 2,000,000 had met death in other ways, the major part of which were shot by operational squads of the security police during the campaign against Russia."

Eichmann as recently as last November was reported to be living and working in Kuwait, the

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Stein, 3860 Kent Avenue, entertained twenty-five guests at a dinner at their home to celebrate the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mildred Stein, to Bernard Brown, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Brown, 5143 Bloomfield Avenue. Mrs. Stein wore a beige and white silk sheath. Mrs. Brown wore a navy-blue and white silk sheath. Miss Stein wore a beige shirtwaist dress, made with a Peter Pan collar; lace down the front of the bodice; and three-quarter-length sleeves. Present with the above were: Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Moishe Wigdor, Mr. and Mrs. David Alter, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Seaman and son, Stanley Seaman; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Seaman, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Berg, Mrs. Samuel Zimring and son, Norman Zimring; and Jerry Brown. Red roses centered the table. The marriage will take place on October 30, at Young Israel Synagogue.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Tenenbaum, 355 Abbott Street, entertained thirty-five guests at a luncheon at Ruby Foo's to celebrate the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Leona; sister of Miss Aileen Tenenbaum; Ben-Ami, aged twelve years; Lotte, seven; and Sheryl, three; granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Brott, 2960 Van Horne Avenue. Present were: Sandra Peterson, Brenda Gorin, Marlene Abramovitch, Marcia Fine, Marion Aronoff, Yolanda Schaefer, Sharon Hill, Edith Wexler, Irene Brun, Bluma Tenenbaum, Paula Schwam, Harriet Leibner, Esther Reichstein, Linda Arshinoff, Lorna Balkin, Harriet Leibner, Susan Gerson, and Marlyn Ship. A pink and white birthday cake and a centerpiece of white gladioli and yellow pom-poms formed the table decoration.

Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Anchel, 4735 Vezina Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Stanley, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Beth Hamedrash Hagadol Synagogue. He is the brother of Gloria Ruth, aged fifteen years. Kiddush was observed. The following evening Mr. and Mrs. Anchel were hosts to two hundred and forty guests at a dinner dance in the Synagogue hall. Mrs. Anchel received in a beige, beaded and appliqued organza sheath; made with a square neckline; cap sleeves; and a fishtail back, over matching peau de soie; with a corsage of mauve orchids. Gloria Ruth wore a white dress of embroidered chiffon. Those who walked down the aisle at the reception, were: Louis David Levin, Michael Gotlieb, Michael Nerenberg, Fred Gotlieb, Philip Gotlieb, Marvyn Redler, Howard Solomon, his cousins; and William Savitsky, Martin Cohen, Alan Beiner, David Migicovsky, Robert Eidelman and Stephen Abramovitch. Following walked the bar-mitzvah boy and his parents. The bar-mitzvah cake was wheeled in and Stanley, blew out the candles. Seated at the head table with the family were: Rabbi and Mrs. L. Rosner, Cantor and Mrs. M. Kaufler, Reverend A. Eichenstein, his teacher; Mr. and Mrs. H. Engel, great-uncle and great-aunt; Mr. and Mrs. D. Gottlieb, of Rockville Centre, Long Island, N. Y., uncle and aunt; and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Anchel, uncle and aunt, who are his godparents. A white and blue bar-mitzvah cake and centerpieces of red and white carnations, pom-poms, and chrysanthemums were used to decorate.

Mr. and Mrs. Max Bass, 452 Glengarry Avenue, celebrated the bar-mitzvah of their son, Edward, who was called to the Reading of the Law, at Beth El Synagogue. He is the brother of Sandra Gita, aged fifteen years. Kiddush was observed. The following evening Mr. and Mrs. Bass received one hundred and fifty guests at the Hillsdale Golf and Country Club. Mrs. Bass was in a white gown re-embroidered with seed-pearl-beads, and cut with a fitted bodice which had a round, scooped neckline, lower at the back, with a white scroll design, appliqued on net, with embroidered medallions of seed pearl beads, and beading. Sandra Gita wore a pink silk organza dress. Seated at the head table with the above were: Rabbi and Mrs. Joseph Brayer, of Bronx, N. Y., cousins; and Cantor H. Gisser. The bar-mitzvah boy gave a speech. Rabbi Brayer asked a blessing over the challah. A white and yellow bar-mitzvah cake was arranged with centerpieces of yellow roses and deep pink carnations for the table.

Wine In Jewish Tradition

BY ARTHUR GILBERT, ASSISTANT RABBI, CONGREGATION BNAI JESHURUN, NEWARK, N.J.

"He who abstains from wine is a sinner" . . . "Wine cheereth God and man." So spoke the authors of Jewish scripture. Wine, whose use is obligatory at Jewish religious functions and observances, is appreciated and lauded in Jewish lore and tradition. The owner of a vineyard about to gather his first harvest was exempt from military service. The grape harvest was an occasion for great rejoicing. However, it was also said, "when wine comes in, knowledge goes out." Rabbi Isaac declared that "wine makes the faces of the wicked red in this world but pale in the world to come." A judge who had drunk wine was not allowed to sit in judgment. A wise man who had drunk wine was not permitted to teach.

All this I learned as I investigated the role of wine in Jewish tradition. It really is surprising how much we take for granted. For as long as I can remember, I always had wine on Friday evening as part of the Kiddush ceremony, and then on Saturday evening as part of Havdolah. We drank wine on Sukkos and Shevuos. Of course, on Passover we were permitted to drink four whole cups, if we could manage it, and if we stayed awake through all the Seder prayers. Sometimes we would skip the last cup and rush to let Elijah into the house. Our fanciest cup was filled with wine in his honor. And then, when I was married, my bride and I drank from a cup of wine. Indeed, I took wine for granted.

One day I received a letter from India. "Dear Rabbi," it began: "We thank you for your letter and for the parcel of leaflets on various Jewish subjects which have been a great help to us. We shall be thankful to receive more such leaflets which are very educative and enlightening to us on our Jewishness. Could you explain the following question. . . . What important part does the cup of wine play in our Jewish tradition? . . . Believe me, dear Rabbi, there is a very great demand here for instructive and educative material on Judaism. A. B. Affif, Secretary, YMHA, Bombay, India."

Well, one might as well have asked me, why do I put on my left shoe first, or why do we stretch at the seventh inning? We just do. I have never given these things a second thought. And I really had never given wine a second thought either. But, after all, our friends in India were quite serious about this. There must be some special significance to wine. And so I began searching our literature. Like Hagar, thirsting for drink when her eyes suddenly were opened, so I began to thirst for knowledge about wine.

Wine has a remarkable Biblical history. For example, the angels were supposed to have fed Adam on meat and wine during his stay in the Garden of Eden. Unfortunately, he enjoyed his wine too much. For according to the legend, the forbidden fruit was the wine grape on which Adam became intoxicated. And so sin entered the world because of wine and women.

Noah preserved a branch of that original slip of vine. He cultivated it and became the first producer of wine. But he, too, like Adam before him, had not learned moderation. In his enthusiasm, Noah let Satan get involved in the planting of the branch and was also led to sin.

Unlike Adam and Noah who were led to sin through wine, Jacob used wine for his own good. We read that when he sought the blessing from his father, Isaac, Jacob gave him wine, "that an exalted mood might descend upon him, for only when a man is joyously excited does the Shekinah (God's spirit) rest upon him."

At the wedding feast of Jacob, wine was served. At the banquet celebrating their reunion, Joseph and his brothers, the sons of Jacob, broke twenty-two years of abstinence from wine. The brothers had abstained as a sign of remorse for selling Joseph into slavery; and Joseph had abstained because he had grieved over the fate of his father. Reuben on his death bed confessed to his sons that it was because of the drunkenness of Bilhah, the wife of his father, that he was led to sin with her. Judah warned that, through his debauchery, he had been led into an improper and unhappy marriage as well as an illicit relationship.

The real cause of the war between the Jews and the Midianites was wine. The Midianite women had intoxicated the Jewish men and then seduced them. Of course, this aroused much enmity between the two camps — all the jealous wives, the rejected suitors, the guilt, inevitably led to war. Thus the High Priest Phineas issued a ban against the wine of the heathen.

King Solomon, who did not drink wine during the years of the building of the Temple, relaxed his vigil on wedding the daughter of Pharaoh. He drank wine, and the Midrash tells us "he changed the whole mode of his life." Samson, on the other hand, did not drink wine. He was commanded to be a Nazarene. Our tradition considers this quite fortunate. For had he been a wine-drinker, he probably would have been even more licentious. He began by marrying a heathen woman and finished by becoming captive of a heathen harlot in Gaza.

Wine, it would seem, is a most dangerous beverage. Yet it can be used to man's great advantage. We have remarked how greatly it was praised. Through the merriment which wine brings, we can merit the Shekinah. It is good for those "such as be faint in the wilderness," and to those "that be heavy of heart." As a metaphor, it was employed to represent a boon. Thus, the Torah was compared to wine. "For wine which grows old in a bottle becomes more valuable, so the words of the Law, as a man grows older, become more precious to him." Israel is likened to the vine. A good wife was viewed as "a fruitful vine by the side of the house." Jerusalem and the Messiah were also compared to wine.

Rav Kahana declared that wine, drunk in moderation, "gives the ability of leadership." Rav Hanan contended that "wine was created for the purpose of consoling the bereaved." The Talmud tells us that "wine is the greatest of all medicines; where wine is lacking, there drugs are needed." "Very old wine benefits the whole body." "Wine gives an appetite, cheers the body, and satisfies the stomach."

Wine had such an appeal that many rabbis considered abstinence foolish. It is recorded that after the fall of the Temple in Jerusalem, 70 A.D., the Perushim ate no meat and drank no wine in mourning this great loss. Rabbi Joshua rebuked them, saying, "Not to mourn at all is impossible; to mourn more than is adequate is also not possible." He had pointed out before that "only such decrees must be issued which the majority of the community can endure." As we know, the majority of the community can not endure total abstinence.

As I gathered this collection of opinions and legends about wine, I also sought for specific references to our ritual use of wine. The use of wine on Friday evening serves to sanctify the Sabbath. Through its use we glorify God, and warm our hearts with the glow of Sabbath joy. Originally the Kiddush was a household celebration of the religious societies of Palestine. Through the Kiddush, the Sabbath and the festivals were sanctified. Later this service was transferred to the Synagogue, particularly in countries were wine-growing was not practiced extensively and wine was not available to everyone. Besides, the Synagogue at first was considered to be an extended family table; it was a shelter for travelers and wayfarers who received their meals there.

The benediction of the Havdolah over a glass of wine also was once a matter of course practiced as part of the third meal eaten on Sabbath. In this prayer, thanksgiving is offered for the Sabbath, for the distinction between the holy and the secular. During the Middle Ages, the doctrine emerged that each Jew was given an "additional soul" on the Sabbath. On that day he was more whole and more fulfilled as a human being. With the departure of the Sabbath, at the moment of Havdolah, the additional soul left. It was the custom to fill the Havdolah cup to overflowing, symbolic of the hope that God's blessings would be conferred upon that household in overflowing measure.

Israeli Trial Of Most Bloodthirsty Nazi Killer, Gestapo Chief

oil sheikdom, says the New York Herald Tribune. After he joined the Gestapo as a young man he was sent to Palestine to get in touch with the Grand Mufti. And while setting up liaison with the Mufti, Eichmann learned Hebrew and Yiddish, explaining to friends that this was part of his "armory against the Jews."

According to the article by the Israeli writer, Leo Heiman, in the Bnai Brith publication, the "National Jewish Monthly," Tuvia Friedmann, director of the Nazi War Crimes Documentary Centre, in Haifa, the man who tracked down Eichmann, was 16 years old when the Germans invaded Poland and caught him in Radom his home town. The next five years were a nightmare of concentration camps and forced-labor stockades.

"He saw his family battered to death with Nazi rifle butts and he saw countless other Jewish men, women, and children shot clubbed, drowned, gassed, burned, and turned into fertilizer and laundry soap," Mr. Heiman wrote.

Mr. Friedmann was scrubbing the floor of an officers' latrine in a concentration camp one day when he overheard a conversation between two S. S. officers. One of them, the deputy camp commandant, was going on leave, and his friend asked him to take a few gift packages to his wife. The parcels included jewelry and clothes taken from Jewish prisoners before their death.

The account said that Mr. Friedmann memorized the officers' home addresses and swore to pay them a visit if he survived.

Shortly before his turn came for the gas chambers, he escaped to the woods and joined a band of Polish guerrillas. He soon became the guerrilla leader, and when the Germans were driven out of Poland he joined the regular Polish Army as an officer. Later he was transferred to the Intelligence Service.

The first two criminals on his list after the war were the two S. S. officers, and he found them. They were hanged. He tracked down hundreds of others, but his main target was always Eichmann.

According to the article, he finally found Eichmann's wife and children in Austria. He decided to kidnap them as hostages to lure Eichmann from hiding. But before he could execute this plan Mr. Friedmann located one of Eichmann's mistresses, says the New York Times. She told him that Eichmann felt no great love for his family and would probably pay no attention to their abduction.

She also disclosed that before his disappearance Eichmann had destroyed most of his photographs, burned letters and documents and had his face changed by plastic surgery. The kidnapping scheme was dropped.

Last October Eichmann was reported to be working for a British oil company in Kuwait. According to the article, Mr. Friedmann felt certain he could track down his quarry there and hire professional killers to assassinate him. But he is reported to have decided to concentrate on capturing him.

Mr. Friedmann was described as intending to have Eichmann extradited to West Germany for trial for crimes against humanity. Mr. Heiman wrote: "The Germans themselves must punish Eichmann and this is the only form of revenge acceptable to Friedmann."

In most Israeli history books on crimes against the Jews, Eichmann is described as the most bloodthirsty of the Nazi leaders, directly in charge of the mass extermination of Jews in Germany, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, and Hungary.

Israeli Supreme Court judgments in war crimes cases repeatedly have described Eichmann as "a monster" and "a bloodthirsty criminal."

One of the most striking testimonies in Israeli courts was given by Joel Brand, former Jewish leader in Budapest.

Mr. Brand described how during the Nazi occupation of Hungary, Eichmann proposed to him a deal of "blood for money" — a promise to liberate 500,000 doomed Hungarian Jews if Jewish authorities persuaded the Western allies to turn over 10,000 trucks to them, says the New York Times. Mr. Brand failed to raise the "ransom" or a substitute acceptable to the Nazis.

Dr. Nahum Goldmann of New York said in Jerusalem that he had suggested to the Israeli Government that it permit Adolf Eichmann to be tried by an international tribunal. Pinhas Rosen, Israel's Minister of Justice, who received the suggestion, was quoted by the Government radio as having said he did not agree with the suggestion. He was said to have indicated that Israel was in no mood to yield the most despised and hunted of Nazis who were believed to have survived.

Dr. Goldmann, who is president of both the World Jewish Congress and World Zionist Organization, said he did not question Israel's right to try Eichmann. He added, however, that it seemed to him decent and correct to invite participation in the trial by those countries whose people suffered most severely under the Nazis during World War II.

Dr. Goldmann said he had suggested a tribunal made up of judges from "all countries from which people were deported and gassed in both Eastern and Western Europe." He also suggested that the tribunal be headed by an Israeli judge.

"I suggested this not from lack of confidence in Israeli courts," he said, "but as a moral and political gesture to the outside world." He pointed out that Jews were not the only ones who suffered.

However, it is becoming increasingly apparent in Israel that Premier David Ben-Gurion wants Eichmann's trial to be conducted by Israel alone, says the New York Times. He is thought to feel that the trial offers Israel a historic chance to settle accounts with the Nazis on behalf of the world's Jews.

The Premier has said he wants to present the whole story of Nazi bestiality, through Eichmann's trial, to inform Israeli youth and the world at large of the horrors he feels they can scarcely comprehend. He has also said he wants to show the world that the Arabs who plot the destruction of Israel are disciples of the Nazis.

Martin Bormann, Hitler's senior Nazi party aide, is "certainly" dead, an official of a research agency that specializes in Nazi and Fascist history said at Bonn, Germany. Mrs. Eva Reichmann, a British historian associated with the Wiener Research Library, said reports from Israel that Bormann had escaped from Berlin in 1945 and was hiding under an assumed name could not be taken seriously.

An Austrian newspaper said that the wife of former Nazi leader Adolf Eichmann caused her husband's arrest when she renewed her passport in Vienna and rejoined him in Argentina, says the New York Herald Tribune. The independent "Neues Oesterreich" said Vera Eichmann left Austria in 1952 with a newly issued Austrian passport. Traveling with her three sons — Horst, Dieter and Klaus, now twenty-four, twenty-one and nineteen years old — she disappeared.

The secret services of Austria, West Germany and Israel were unable to trace her. But the newspaper said they knew she must come back to Austria within five years to renew her passport. So they waited. She was a year late, but finally showed up in Vienna in 1958. The newspaper said some unidentified Austrian official tipped off Israeli agents and they immediately put her under constant surveillance.

After a short stay in Linz, Austria, the newspaper said she returned to Argentina, unaware that she was always watched by Israeli agents. Finally, "Neues Oesterreich" said, she involuntarily led the agents to her husband May 11 in a suburb of Buenos Aires, where he was arrested.

The Austrian newspaper account tied in somewhat with a dispatch in the Buenos Aires newspaper, "La Razon." The Argentine newspaper said Eichmann, accused Nazi executioner of millions of Jews during World War II, was seized in a Buenos Aires suburb by Israeli agents on the night of May 11, drugged, held incommunicado at a Jewish-owned ranch outside the city, and then spirited out of the country in a private plane.

"La Razon's" account said Eichmann had been hiding in Argentina for 15 years. Following the September, 1965, revolution which toppled dictator Juan D. Peron, he had tried to fade from sight.

With the implied protection of Peron removed, "La Razon" said, Eichmann went into business with the late Ante Pavelic, whom he had known when both were setting up concentration camps for Jews in Croatia, according to the New York Herald Tribune. The business included sales of electrical and construction materials.

Later, the newspaper said he formed another business with Vlado Secen, a former colonel in the personal bodyguard of Pavelic. But six months ago, Secen allegedly skipped out to the Dominican Republic, taking with him money that belonged to Eichmann.

"La Razon" said Israel repeatedly had asked for Eichmann's extradition when it was learned he was in Argentina. But the requests apparently got nowhere during the Peron regime, and Eichmann was able to disappear.

Finally, "La Razon" said, three teams of Israeli agents again found Eichmann's trail. It said they surprised him in the Buenos Aires suburb of San Martin between 7:30 and 9 p.m. on May 11. It said when he did not try to flee, the agents drugged him, took him to a ranch owned by an Israeli organization in greater Buenos Aires, and held him until he was spirited away.

The newspaper said Eichmann was placed aboard a plane which took him as far as Recife, Brazil, where he was put aboard another plane and flown to Israel with papers identifying him as Ricardo Clement.

The "Frankfurt Allgemeine Zeitung" of West Germany said that one of its reporters had interviewed Klaus Eichmann in Buenos Aires. The younger Eichmann, who works as a mechanic and is married to a girl there, was quoted as saying his mother frequently had visited some one known as "Uncle Ricardo Clement" in a near-by area of Buenos Aires, but that he had no idea the "uncle" was his own father.

Young Eichmann said "Clement" had been missing from Buenos Aires for some time. He added that he had believed his father to have been dead since 1945, and that his mother never spoke of him.

The Israeli government has never announced where Eichmann was seized, says the New York Herald Tribune.

Informants requested anonymity in giving this picture of Eichmann's life: "He was always on the move. He traveled from coun-

World-famed artist, Marc Chagall, left; Clarence E. Pickett, executive secretary emeritus of the American Friends Service Committee, centre; and Dr. Brock Chisholm, of Canada, former Director General of the World Health Organization, right, will be among the distinguished international leaders in "The Quest for Peace" to be honoured at the Brandeis University commencement on June 12. Principal speaker will be 1959 Nobel Peace Prize recipient Philip J. Noel-Baker, of the British House of Parliament. Others being awarded honorary degrees are: Ralph Bunche, of the United Nations, also a Nobel Peace Prize recipient; world-famous contralto, Marian Anderson; Frank P. Graham, United Nations representative for India and Pakistan; Dr. James T. Shotwell, President Emeritus of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace; atomic scientist Dr. Eugene Rabinowitch, of the University of Illinois; and Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, Vice-President of the State of Israel Bond Organization, and expert in work with displaced persons. The Baccalaureate exercises in the famed Three Chapels Area on the Brandeis campus, at Waltham, Mass., will open with an invocation by Rev. Arthur F. LaBlanc, C.S.P., Chaplain of the Brandeis Newman Club; and the Benediction will be given by Rabbi Manfred Vogel, Chaplain of the Hillel Foundation at Brandeis. Dr. Abram L. Sachar, President of the University, will deliver the valedictory. David E. Matz, of Philadelphia, Penna., President of the Senior Class at Brandeis, will also address the audience. The Brandeis University Chorus will sing two numbers during the non-sectarian services. Baccalaureate speaker, Dr. Pickett, has been identified with activities in Quaker movements for almost fifty years, first as a minister in Friends churches and as secretary of Young Friends activities in America, later as a professor of Biblical Literature at Earlham College, and from 1929 to 1950, as executive secretary of American Friends Service Committee, where he became involved with relief work in American coal fields, and in the following years served as consultant to the Division of Subsistence Homesteads of the U.S. Department of the Interior; to the Resettlement Administration in Washington, D.C.; and to the Farm Security Administration and the National Housing Agency. During his service with the American Friends Service Committee he also travelled extensively in Europe and the Near East on assignments among refugees in behalf of the United Nations. Named honorary secretary of the Committee in 1950, he continued with his work to improve East-West relationships, and was five times a member of the International Quaker team working with the U.N. In 1952 he served as a member of the President's Commission on Immigration and Naturalization. Since 1955 Dr. Pickett has been executive secretary emeritus of the American Friends Service Committee, and participated in a good-will mission to the Soviet Union. In 1957 he, with Norman Cousins, founded the National Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy, and became its co-chairman. Last year Dr. Pickett was appointed Honorary Consul General of Japan at Philadelphia; and a member of the Board of Directors of the United States Committee for Refugees.

MONTREAL ENGAGEMENTS

MARRIAGES

FRANK-WISEMAN

The marriage of Miss Angela Wiseman, daughter of Mrs. Jenny Wiseman, 3780 Plamondon Avenue, to William Frank, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Frank, 1445 Oulmet Street, took place at the home of Reverend M. Master, who officiated, on Sunday, June 5, at one o'clock. The bride was given in marriage by her mother, and her uncle, Boris Zalezniak, 2165 Scott Street. Her long, princess gown was of white nylon, made with a round neckline, cut to a V at the back; cape sleeves; and full bouffant skirt. Her shoulder-length veil of tulle illusion was caught to matching flower petals; and she carried a bouquet of pale pink Sweetheart roses. Miss Belita Bernard, was maid of honour, wearing a gown of white organdy and yellow taffeta, made with a fitted bodice; a round neckline; cape sleeves; and full skirt. She carried a Colonial nosegay of white carnations and yellow satin ribbon. Dr. Hersh Frank, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Abe Taran, Irwin Frank, Harold Dorfman, Nathan Ladenheim, Jerry Sherman, and Larry Resnick. Isaak Lionel Zalezniak, cousin of the bride, was page boy. White and pink gladioli and carnations were the wedding flowers. Mrs. Jenny Wiseman, mother of the bride, received in a gown of pink lace; with a pink hat. Mrs. Louis Frank, mother of the groom, was in a beige sheath; with a pink hat. Their corsages were of pink orchids. Mr. and Mrs. William Frank spent their wedding trip in Puerto Rico, the bride travelling in a two-piece dress, composed of a brown print silk bodice and white linen skirt, with a short, white jacket. Here for the occasion were: Mrs. W. Talisman and Allan, Steven, and Karen, of Hollywood, Florida and Dr. and Mrs. H. Frank, of Detroit, Mich.

Israel Medical School Leader Deplores Arab Rejection Of Health Benefits

Regret that Israel's achievements in health and medical education cannot be applied in the neighboring Arab countries, "which reject all kinds of cooperation, even in this field," was expressed by Dr. Moshe Prywes, associate dean of the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School of Jerusalem, who was the main speaker at a dinner of the American Jewish Physicians' Committee, part of the American Friends of the Hebrew University, in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Plaza, in New York. Dr. John H. Garlock, U.S. surgeon and president of the Physicians' Committee, was chairman of the event, which marked the tenth anniversary of the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School, and had present over 200 doctors. Other speakers were: Bernard Cherrick, executive vice-chairman of the board of governors of the Hebrew University, and Dr. Israel S. Wechsler, neurologist, and honorary president of the American Friends.

While deploring the lack of contact between Israel and the Arab countries, Dr. Prywes voiced satisfaction that "new horizons have recently opened with respect to other new and emerging nations in Africa and South Asia. Israel is doing its best to assist the efforts of these countries in the fields of health and medical education, as in other spheres." Describing Israel as "an island of health in the Middle East," Dr. Prywes stated that "during the last few years we have succeeded in eradicating or in bringing under control all the infectious diseases which are endemic in this region." Life expectancy in Israel is 71 years for men and 73 years for women, Dr. Prywes reported. For the Arab citizens of Israel, life expectancy "is about twice as long as that in the neighboring Arab countries."

Dr. Prywes reviewed the role of the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School in achieving these results. Pointing out that the Medical School is an outstanding center of medical and biological research, he explained how "the results of this research were applied to keep the population healthy, especially during the past ten years, when a country of about 800,000 absorbed a tremendous immigration of about 1,000,000, many of whom came from underdeveloped areas of Africa and Asia." Dr. Prywes further reported that the Hebrew University-Hadassah Medical School "now has an enrollment of approximately 800 students, and 400 full-time teachers and research scientists are on its staff. Five schools are now functioning within the framework of the Medical Center in Jerusalem: the School of Medicine, the School of Dentistry, the School of Pharmacy, the School of Microbiology and the Division of Post-graduate Training. A new home for all of these teaching and research institutions, as well as for the Hadassah-Hebrew University Hospital, is now being completed at Ein Karem, Jerusalem."

The Hebrew University's significant contributions to underdeveloped areas of the world were also emphasized by Mr. Cherrick. He reported on the growing number of students from African and Asian countries who are studying at the University. "They will apply the knowledge and skills acquired in Jerusalem to the progress and welfare of their respective lands. This may well prove to be one of the significant cultural developments of this era, since it holds the promise of a brighter future for generations still unborn," Mr. Cherrick declared.

In reviewing the activities of the American Jewish Physicians' Committee in behalf of the Hebrew University since 1921, Dr. Garlock stated that at the moment every effort is being exerted to supply the University with the necessary funds to finish the Medical School buildings. The future efforts of the Physicians' Committee will be toward enlarging the program of post-graduate education in Israel, and lending encouragement to the development of medical research activities in the Medical School. Dr. Wechsler laid particular stress on the importance of furthering the medical research program of the Hebrew University.

Dr. Prywes has visited various institutions of medical research in the U.S. During a scientific mission to Guatemala, he was made an honorary professor of the University of San Carlos.

Dr. Jack Mandelson, son of Mrs. Irving Reiter, 4130 Kent Avenue, Montreal, and the late Simon Mandelson, graduated from McGill University, Faculty of Medicine; having received there in 1956 a Bachelor of Science degree with great distinction. He was a University Scholar; a Montby book prize winner; and a member of Alpha Omega honour medical society. He represented McGill at the last annual meeting of the American College of Surgeons in Atlantic City. He held third place for high aggregate standing in the final year; and won the Lieutenant-Governor's Gold Medal in public health and social medicine; and the Mona Brostman Shockman prize for the highest standing in psychiatry in the final year. He will interne at the Jewish General Hospital.

MONTREAL ENGAGEMENTS

Cantor and Mrs. Henry Hearst of Swampscott, Mass., formerly of Montreal, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Deborah Goldie Hearst, to Saul Charles Palamo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Palamo, of Worcester, Mass. Miss Hearst is a graduate of Chandler School for Women. Her fiance is a graduate of Dartmouth College, and Boston University Graduate School. A fall wedding is planned.

MARRIAGES

FELDMAN-RUBIN

The marriage of Miss Beverley Sue Rubin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Rubin, 3895 Linton Avenue, to Norman Feldman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Moses Feldman, 470 Harris Street, took place at Shaare Zion Synagogue, on Sunday, May 15, at six o'clock. Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen officiated, assisted by Reverend Solomon Gisser. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She was gowned in white Alencon lace, cut with a fitted bodice; high neckline; long sleeves; and full bouffant skirt. Her fingertip veil of tulle illusion was attached to a tiara of seed-pearl-beads and bugle beads; and she carried a prayer book with white orchids and stephanotis. Miss Joyce Rubin, sister of the bride, as maid of honour, wore a strapless gown of pink nylon; made with a full bouffant skirt; and a bandeau of pink carnations; and carried a cascade bouquet of pink and white carnations. Eloise Samuels, niece of the bride; and Ellen and Sheryl Yanover, nieces of the groom, were flower girls in beige nylon dresses made with embroidered skirts. They carried nosegays of pink and white carnations. Saul Yanover, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man. Clifford Samuels, nephew of the bride, was page boy. Standards of pink and white carnations, roses, gladioli, and greenery decorated the Synagogue and hall. Mrs. Louis Rubin, mother of the bride, received in an embroidered, blue, organza gown; with a hat of that material. Mrs. Moses Feldman, mother of the groom, wore a champagne-coloured, embroidered organza gown; with a hat of the same colour, both having corsages of pink carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Norman Feldman spent their wedding trip touring through the Adirondack Mountains. The bride went away in a grey, flannel, dressmaker suit. They have taken up residence at 4711 Plamondon Avenue. Here for the marriage were: Mrs. A. Weiss, of Van Nuys, Cal.; Mrs. M. Alper and Mimi, of Bronx, N.Y.; J. Kaminer and Masha, of New York, formerly of Israel; Mr. and Mrs. D. Nichenberg and Queenie and Harvey, of Ottawa, Ont.; Mr. and Mrs. I. Schneiderman, of Brockville, Ont.; and Mr. and Mrs. S. Schneiderman, of Kemptville, Ont.

For The June Bride — And Every Bride

The Wedding Ring

BY RABBI J. WEINBERG

The custom for the bridegroom to place a ring upon the forefinger of the right hand of the bride and to recite the formula: "Behold, thou art consecrated unto me by this ring, according to the Law of Moses and of Israel," forms the most important part of our marriage ceremony. What is the meaning and significance of this custom? When and where did it originate? Why is the ring placed on the forefinger of the right hand when among non-Jews it is placed on the fourth finger of the left hand? And why must the ring be made of plain metal, whether gold, silver, or platinum, and may not contain diamonds or any other precious stones?

Neither in the Bible nor in the Talmud are there any references found to this custom. The ring, as a means of effecting a marriage, was certainly unknown among our people in ancient times. In Biblical times, a wife was acquired by direct purchase. The father of the bridegroom or the bridegroom himself paid for the bride in money, kind, or by rendering service. Jacob served his father-in-law fourteen years for the privilege of marrying his two daughters. In Talmudic times, the acquisition of a bride by direct purchase, was replaced by a gift of money or of some article of value. Thus, the Mishna enumerates several ways by which a bride may be acquired.

Marriage may be effected by the bridegroom giving the bride a gift of money or some article of value or by a document, provided that the bridegroom made it quite clear in the presence of witnesses that he was giving her the gift for the purpose of marriage. If an article was used, it was essential that the value of the article be known to the bride at the time of marriage, but no mention of a ring as a means of effecting a Jewish marriage. It was only in the eighth century, A.C.E., centuries after the closing of the Talmud, that the wedding ring began to make its appearance in Jewish marriage.

The earliest record of the wedding ring appears in Egyptian literature. The idea fitted in with Egyptian thought, as in hieroglyphics the circle represents eternity. By applying the name to a circle for the finger, marriage was thus identified with a tie through eternity. Both ancient Greece and Rome used rings in their marriage ceremonies. A Greek wedding ring of the fourth century, B.C.E., bears the following exalted inscription: "To her who excels, not only in virtue and prudence, but also in wisdom." Another early example carries an inscription as modern as to-day's colloquialism — the single Greek word meaning "Honey."

The Roman wedding ring consisted of iron, which had an appropriate significance because of the traditional strength and durability of this metal. In an old Latin work, we read: "The form of the ring being circular, that is, round and without end, importeth this much, that mutual love and hearty affection should roundly flow from one to the other, as in a circle, and that continually and for ever."

Apart from the symbol of unity and eternity associated with the wedding ring in ancient times, it has been suggested that the placing of a ring on the bride's finger developed from the circular fetters or bracelets placed upon the captive woman of primitive times, and the ring, therefore, being a symbolic relic of the woman's ancient status of subjection and servitude to her master. On the other hand, in later times in Rome, there existed a custom of presenting the bride together with the ring, the keys of the bridegroom's house, thus signifying that the wife now becomes the mistress of her husband's home. It has, therefore, been suggested by a number of scholars that the wedding ring was introduced into Jewish marriage as a result of contact between Rome and Jewry.

According to later Rabbinic law, the wedding ring need not necessarily be made of gold. It could be silver-plated or even brazen, and to-day it is usually made of platinum, but the law has been accepted that the ring may not contain any diamonds or other precious stones. This law was laid down by R. Tam, in the eleventh century A.C.E., its purpose being to avoid any deception as to the value of the ring being practised on the woman.

For, according to a Talmudic statement, "If a man betrothes a woman with an article, which the bridegroom claims to be worth so much, and it was subsequenlty discovered that the article was worth less, the marriage is not valid, since the bride can always claim that had she known at the time of marriage that the article was worth less, she would not have given her consent to the marriage." That the bride's consent is essential for the marriage to be valid, is clearly stated in the Talmud.

Thus the law is laid down that it is forbidden for a father to betroth his daughter whilst she is a minor, but he must wait until she grows up and makes her own choice. Already in Biblical times we find that the bride's consent to a marriage was required. Thus, we are told that after the parents of Rebekah had given their consent to the marriage of their daughter to the son of Abraham, they said to Eliezer, "We will call the damsel, and enquire of her mouth. And they called Rebekah, and said unto her, Wilt thou go with this man? And she said I will go."

Among non-Jews the ring is placed on the fourth finger of the woman's left hand. This is explained by some scholars to signify the subjection of the wife to her husband. The right hand signifies power, authority, independence; the left hand, subjection and dependence. As to the fourth finger, it was thought in ancient times that a certain vein or nerve in the fourth finger of the left hand ran directly to that time-honoured seat of the affections — the heart. In the seventeenth century, however, when the question was asked, "Why is it that the person to be married is enjoined to put a ring upon the fourth finger of his spouse's left hand? the answer was given:

"There is nothing more in this than the custom was handed down to the present age, from the practice of our ancestors, who found the left hand more convenient for such ornaments than the right, in that it is less employed and the place of least wear. For that reason, they chose the fourth finger, which is not only less used than either of the rest, but is more capable of preserving a ring from bruises, since it is guarded by the fingers on either side. Whereas the other fingers may be singly stretched to their full length and straightened, this is not possible with the fourth finger, which can only be extended in company with some other finger."

It would, appear however, from a number of records that most fingers of both hands, including the thumbs have been used for wearing the wedding ring. During the Elizabethan period in England, the wedding ring was worn on the thumb, as is shown in portraits of ladies of that time. In the ancient ritual of marriage in England, the ring was placed by the husband on the top of the thumb of the left hand, with the words, "In the name of the Father"; he then removed it to the forefinger, saying "and of the Son," then to the middle finger, adding "and of the Holy Ghost"; finally he put it on the fourth finger, with the closing word, "Amen."

A Check-List Of Questions And Answers To Assist Wedding Preparations

Which side of the synagogue do guests sit on? The bride's guests are always on the left, facing the altar; the groom's always on the right.

If the father isn't living, who gives the bride away? A brother, uncle or close friend may have the honour.

Does the bride wear her engagement ring during the ceremony, and is additional jewellery worn? The engagement ring should be worn on the right hand until after the ceremony, so the wedding ring may be placed on the left without difficulty. Simplicity in jewellery is the rule — a pearl necklace, pearl or diamond earrings is appropriate. Family heirloom jewellery may be worn, if not too elaborate.

How do mothers of the bride and groom dress? This depends on the formality of the wedding, but they should consult beforehand to avoid embarrassment, such as identical dresses or wearing colours that clash. The mother of the bride should have first choice.

Should presents be given to the attendants? Engraved charms are a nice idea, with perhaps the date of the wedding and the bride's initials. The maid of honour's present should be a little more important — perhaps a bracelet with the charm. The best man should receive a slightly more important gift than the ushers.

Should engraved cards of acknowledgement be sent for presents received? Thank-you notes should be written promptly in the bride's own handwriting.

How is the receiving line arranged? Parents of the bride — Parents of the groom — Best man — Bride — Groom — Maid of Honour — Bridesmaids; Grandparents of the Bride and Groom.

What should be done immediately after the honeymoon? Write thank-you notes for wedding presents not previously acknowledged. Also for any special favours done by helpful friends and relatives at the last moment. Use formal notepaper with monogram or name at the top for the thank-you notes and for general correspondence.

The Bride's Calendar Arranges For Leisured Planning

Two months before, — decide upon the type of wedding to be planned . . . formal? . . . informal? Make arrangements with the synagogue. Make preliminary arrangements for the reception — synagogue, hotel or club, catering, music.

Choose the bridal party. Determine the amount of money to be spent on trousseau, both linen and clothes. Start shopping for the wedding dress, the bride's mother's dress; and designs for dresses for the bridal party. Also start shopping for trousseau clothes.

Decide on the colour schemes and furnishings for the new home. Buy now only what is needed. Buy staple items — lingerie and linen now. Start the wedding guest list. Consult the stationer and order invitations, announcements and personal stationery. Register the patterns chosen with the Gift Counselor of local department stores.

One month before, address wedding invitations and have them stamped and ready to mail. Get them into the mail during first week. Try to have any showers friends will give now — rather than later on. Finish linen, lingerie and silver shopping.

Check up on costumes for bridal party, to insure delivery one week before wedding. Check trousseau purchases — be sure monograms will be finished in time. Have fittings on the wedding gown — these often run into three or four. Acknowledge each gift as it arrives.

One week before make sure purchases have arrived and are in good condition. Are they the right size and fit? Any last minute additions to clothes trousseau? Are the gifts perfectly displayed? Have the rehearsal the day before if possible.

ring on the forefinger of the right hand, is connected by some scholars with the finger of God, mentioned in the Bible. This finger is called by the Rabbis "Etzbah" and the Bible mentions the "Etzbah" of God that smote the Egyptians. It is interesting to note that the gods of Greece and Rome wore rings on their forefingers and consequently the wearing of a ring on the forefinger became the emblem of divine supremacy. It has, however, been accepted that the ring is placed on the forefinger of the right hand, since it is the "index" finger, and, therefore, the most prominent finger.

It should be noted that in Talmudic times and probably as late as the tenth century, A.C.E., marriage was effected by two stages. The first stage was the "Erusin," the betrothal, which formed the most important part of marriage. The betrothal bore a definite binding character. The bride could not marry another man without a divorce from her bridegroom, and infidelity was visited with capital punishment. In the eyes of the law, the betrothed woman was regarded as a married woman.

It has, therefore, been suggested that it was only at the betrothal and not at the marriage that the ring was placed on the finger of the bride and the formula recited. The second stage, the "Nissuin" took place after an interval of time, usually twelve months after the betrothal, which consisted of bringing the bride into the home of her bridegroom. There are no ceremonies mentioned in connection with the second stage. After the tenth century, however, it became customary to perform both stages simultaneously.

The modern "Engagement" is, therefore, a relic of the ancient betrothal, but its character has completely changed. It is no longer considered binding and no religious ceremonials are connected with it. This will explain why today, the bridegroom is permitted to present his bride at the "engagement", with a ring studded with diamonds or other precious stones, which would not have been possible in Talmudic times. In many museums, one can see a large selection of rings, used by our people at betrothals during the Middle Ages. Many of these rings bear the Hebrew inscription, "Mazel Tov," meaning "good luck." Some of these rings contain the figure of a tower or the figure of the temple placed on their summit.

In conclusion, I should like to describe a remarkably fine example of a betrothal ring, which one can see in a museum in London. The ring has five filigree bosses equidistant along the broad exterior, which is also ornamented with filigree scroll-work, filled with blue and white enamel. The summit of the hoop is surmounted by a pyramid-shaped tower opening upon a hinge. The words "Mazel Tov" are engraved on the inside of the ring. The tower represents the ark of the covenant; the bosses or points are supposed to represent the number of witnesses present at the betrothal. These points or bosses consist of rosettes with six leaves, each of blue, and six leaves of white enamel. The pyramidical ark has the sides filled with blue enamel only; on the two narow sides there is a small perforation to represent the window, in allusion to the dove.

How To Choose The Wedding Gown And Veil

Because four weeks are usually required for the bridal salon of a store to make and deliver the dress, plus another two weeks to have fittings and alterations completed, the wedding date determines what will be available to the bride. In addition, the date of the wedding determines fabric and style suggestions. For example, for a summer wedding a store might suggest organdy, whereas a winter date could call for brocade or satin. Then, of course, whether the ceremony will be formal or informal, determines the style.

The style should highlight and complement the bride's facial features and figure. No matter what the time of the year, short or three-quarter sleeves are generally prettiest for young girls.

First of all, a veil should be shaped to become the face as well as the gown. Nothing is more beautiful than the long veil, beyond the end of the train. This holds true for the court or cathedral train. For the sweeping train or floor-length dress, a very full waist-length veil is suggested.

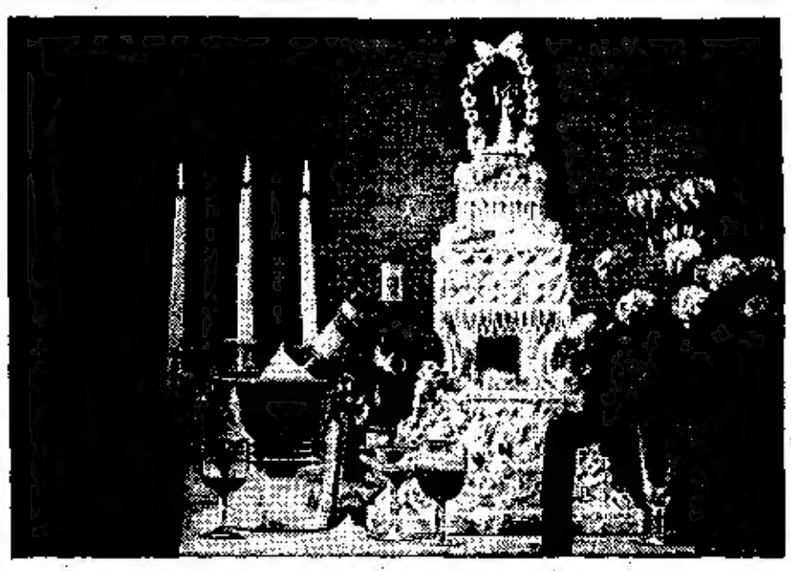
The Wedding Toasts Are Important!

After the reception, and wedding luncheon or supper, when all the glasses have been filled a friend of the family, or the rabbi, rises to propose the toast to the bride. Unless the men of the wedding party are professional speakers, they will find that the most effective toasts are also the most simply worded.

To start things off, the rabbi or an old family friend, proposes the toast to the bride. Traditionally he recounts an amusing incident or two from the bride's childhood, comments on her beauty as a bride, and after conveying the good wishes of all the guests he will congratulate the groom on his wife.

The groom should thank the toastmaster sincerely, for his kind words and assure him, and the other guests, that in the years to come he will do everything possible to deserve the bride and make her happy. He will thank the guests for coming to wish the bride and groom well, and for their generosity in helping them to set up their new home. He should then include a few words of thanks to both sets of parents; and then he asks the guests to rise and drink a toast to the bridesmaids. The best man replies to this toast.

The final speech of the day is made by the bride's father, introduced by the best man. He will say how happy he and the bride's mother are: and he will thank the guests for their kindness in coming to wish the bridal couple well.



Happy the Bride...

You'll be radiant and relaxed at your wedding reception when you leave the details to the Hotel de LaSalle. You're free to enjoy yourself and accept your tributes graciously, confident that everything will run smoothly and efficiently.

The service is excellent, yet unobtrusive, with those little personal touches your guests will remember. And, as always at the LaSalle, the food is superlative. You can choose from our own deliciously planned wedding breakfasts, complete with imported wine for the toasts — or work out your own in conjunction with our helpful banquet manager.

You can choose from 3 air-conditioned reception rooms — the new Salon Maisonneuve (seats 350), Le Petit Café, the Oak Room. And as a mark of the extra service you can expect from the LaSalle, a private dressing room is provided for the bride.

Whether you're planning a small, intimate gathering of 25 people, or a large formal reception for 350, you can leave all the details to the competent LaSalle staff — enjoy every minute of your big day.

TORONTO MARRIAGES

ZULAUF-HURWITZ

The marriage of Miss Bella Hurwitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hyman Hurwitz, of Cape Town, South Africa, to Harvey Ray Zulauf, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Zulauf, 212 Dunvegan Road, was solemnized on May 22, at Holy Blossom Temple by Rabbi A. L. Feinberg. The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Benjamin Hurwitz. She wore a gown of powder-blue, silk organza, over peau de soie, fashioned with a fitted bodice; and bouffant skirt. Her fingertip illusion veil was fastened to a matching coronet; and she carried a white prayer book adorned with a white orchid and stephanotis. Miss Karen Susan Zulauf, sister of the groom, was maid of honour, and wore a pale green, silk organza gown, styled with a fitted bodice; portrait collar; and bouffant skirt; with a matching tiara. She carried a bouquet of pink roses, carnations, and white chrysanthemums. Alan H. Zulauf, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were: Robert David Weber and Arnold L. Tepperman, cousins of the groom. The altar and canopy were decorated with standards of white chrysanthemums, roses, gladioli, and greenery. A dinner and reception followed. Mrs. Zulauf, mother of the groom, wore a navy-blue, shantung gown with its own coat; and had a corsage of pink carnations and white pompoms. Mr. and Mrs. Zulauf spent their wedding trip in the Catskills Mountains, of New York. The bride departed in a dress of beige nylon over beige print silk, with its own coat; also an off-white hat; and had a corsage of yellow and white carnations. They will reside in North Hollywood, Calif.

ROTH-RAIDER

The marriage of Miss Sheila Raider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Raider, 1731 Bathurst Street, to Paul Roth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Roth, 152 Glen Cedar Road, was solemnized on Tuesday, May 24, at half-past five o'clock, in Adath Israel Synagogue, by Rabbi Erwin Schild, assisted by Cantor Murray Nixon. The bride was given in marriage by her parents. She wore a long gown of white, silk organza, cut with a boat-shaped neckline; cap sleeves; and a fitted bodice. Her bouffant skirt extended to a chapel train; and her finger-tip, illusion veil was caught to a crown of pearls. She carried a bouquet of Calla lilies. Miss Annabelle Raider, sister of the bride, was maid of honour. She wore a pink, organza gown, styled with large, puffed sleeves, and a bouffant skirt; with a matching pink organza headband; and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Elizabeth Roth, niece of the groom, was flower girl. She wore a light blue, organza dress; and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Sidney Roth, brother of the groom, was the best man. The groomsmen were: Norman Roth, brother of the groom; Sanford Switzer, cousin of the groom; Stanley Wagman, cousin of the bride; William Sherman, Stanley Gold, Warren Freedman, Sol. Silverstein, and Michael Winston. Steven Rosenberg, cousin of the bride, was ring-bearer. The altar and canopy were decorated with bouquets and standards of white chrysanthemums. Wedding music was played by Murray Alter and his orchestra. At a dinner at the Synagogue, three hundred and twenty guests were received. Mrs. Raider was attired in a blue lace and organza gown, styled with a boat-shaped neckline; short sleeves; and a semi-flared skirt; with a matching hat; and had a purple orchid corsage. Mrs. Roth wore a long, blue peau de soie gown which had a beaded bodice; and a bouffant skirt. Her hat matched it; and she had a purple orchid corsage. Mr. and Mrs. Paul Roth spent their wedding trip in Puerto Rico. The bride travelled in a chartreuse-coloured two-piece ensemble, consisting of a sheath, and a coat. They will reside at 2500 Bathurst Street.

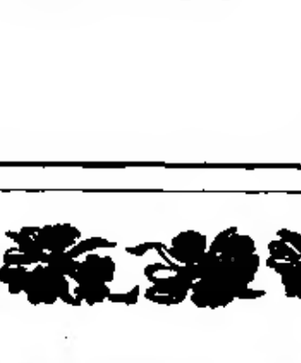
The Jewish Ceremony For The Wedding Is Traditional

The processional for this service is: the ushers, bridemaids, a ring bearer, the best man; then the father of the groom and the groom, with his mother on his right; then the flower girl and the maid or matron of honor. The last to enter are the bride's mother, the bride and the bride's father. Sometimes the grandparents of the bride and groom are included in the wedding procession.

There is no formal giving away of the bride. As the ceremony begins, the maid of honor is at the bride's right; the best man at the groom's left. The other attendants are outside the canopy in the usual grouping. The ceremony of the Seven Blessings proceeds.

In the ceremony of the ring, the rabbi gives the gold band to the groom, who places it on the index finger of the bride's right hand. The ceremony continues with the Three-fold Blessing of the High Priest, the drinking of the ceremonial cup, a benediction, and the ceremony of the Breaking of the Glass.

The recessional after the ceremony is led by the bride and groom, who are followed by the bride's parents, groom's parents, flower girl or page, maid or matron of honor, bridesmaids, ushers, best man, the grandparents.



Guide To Bedding Gives Advice To All Homemakers

When it comes to the question of what makes a fine mattress, sheet, pillow or blanket, most women are half asleep. United States Steel intends to arouse them with an amusing and, coincidentally, highly informative booklet devoted to facts on bedding.

Called "The Wonderful, Wacky World of Sleep and How to Buy the Stuff It's Made of," the booklet summarizes major considerations in buying bedding. It is available free from "SLEEP," United States Steel Corporation, Pittsburgh 30, Pa.

Sprinkled throughout the text to keep readers interested and awake are such quaint bits of information reports the New York Times, such as the fact that in one place in Europe some people sleep with a pad under their feet instead of under their heads because "their feet work harder than their heads."

In its discussion of mattresses, the booklet makes a strong argument for the king-size bed as opposed to the double-bed. "Divide a standard double-bed between two sleepers, and each gets about as much room as he or she would in the baby's crib," it says.

Other facts of interest noted in the publication include:

Ticking — Check the edging. Good mattresses have borders with the ticking edging reinforced. Many quality mattresses are bordered with steel spring wire to give the edges a strong framework.

Pillows — A mixture of down and waterfowl feathers is better than 100 per cent down because it is more buoyant and lasts longer. Chicken and turkey feathers make a firmer and less expensive pillow than 100 per cent down. If the pillow droops when held in the palm of the hand it is not filled properly. Make sure the cover is tightly woven so the feathers cannot work through it.

Sheets — The quality of a sheet depends mainly on the uniform firmness of the yarn and the number of threads in each square inch. For muslin, which is less smooth yet more durable than percale, a good "count" is 140 to 148 threads to the square inch. For percale 180 and up. Count to check for the proper number of threads. Then check by holding up to light for uneven yarns, knots and bunches. (In this area this may seem a bit outdated, since most sheets today come packaged with the "count" listed on the plastic cover.)

Blankets — Look for deep nap and close weave. A heavy blanket will not mean it is warmer than a light one. Two lighter blankets are better than one heavy one because there is a layer of air between the two. It is better to have less weight on you during sleep because in the process of breathing, "the chest does about 7,000 blanket push-ups a night."

New Brunswick Section

Dr. and Mrs. B. H. Kanter and daughter, Brenda Lori, 63 Alma Street, Moncton, attended the convocation at Dalhousie University at which his brother, Yale C. Kanter, received the Medical Degree. Enroute they spent a few days with her brother and sister-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. H. Lewis, and family of Wolfville, N.S.

Mr. and Mrs. S. I. Kanter, 119 King Street East, Saint John, returned from Halifax, N.S., after attending the convocation at Dalhousie University, and Victoria General Hospital, in Halifax, N.S., in which their son, Yale C. Kanter, received the Medical Degree from the Faculty of Medicine and received a certificate of a completed rotating internship from the Victoria General Hospital.

Dr. Yale C. Kanter, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. I. Kanter, 119 King Street East, Saint John, graduated from Dalhousie University with the Medical Degree. In 1953 he was an honour graduate of Saint John High School and a First Division matriculant in the Province of New Brunswick. He took pre-medical studies at Dalhousie University. In 1955 he entered the Faculty of Medicine there. In 1958 he received his Commission in the R.C.A.F. and is a graduate of its Officers Training School. While in Medical School Dr. Kanter was an active member of Dalhousie Medical Students Society, and served one year as assistant editor and three years as editor of the Students Medical Journal, which has a circulation throughout North America. During the past year he was appointed honourary editor. Through this medium he has contributed several papers to medical literature. Dr. Kanter wrote a medical column in the University newspaper, the Gazette, in which he reviewed the history of medicine. This year he was awarded the Medical Society's Book Award for his continued interest, and last year won the highest award of the Society, the Medical Insignia with an engraved Gold Bar. He is a member of Tau Iota Chapter of Tau Epsilon Phi Fraternity; and of Alpha Eta Chapter of Phi Rho Sigma Medical Fraternity, and was honoured by the former in 1956 with a Silver Key Award. He has completed a twelve month rotating internship, having interned in the Victoria General Hospital, Children's Hospital, and Grace Maternity Hospital in Halifax; and the St. Johns General Hospital in St. Johns, Newfoundland. Dr. Kanter was recently appointed to the resident staff of internal medicine at the Mount Sinai Hospital of Cleveland, Ohio, and will commence his duties at the hospital in July. His brother, Dr. B. H. Kanter, of Moncton, N. B., is Coroner of Westmorland County.

Mayor M. M. Baig and Hon. Joseph W. Bourgeois are contending for the Progressive Conservative seats in the City of Moncton in the New Brunswick election to be held on June 27. More than 900 Conservative supporters present at a nominating convention in Moncton High School auditorium chose Mayor Baig on a first ballot vote. Premier Hugh John Flemming was a platform guest at the nominating meeting. Mayor Baig was nominated by Ambrose Wheeler; seconded by Sifori LeBlanc.

Young Judean Youth Camp, Camp Kadimah, in Lunenburg, N.S., has as staff personnel: Louis Greenspan, camp director; Mrs. I. Levenberg; I. Levenberg, program director; Misses Michele Landsberg and Marcia Lee Jacobson; and Barry Jacobson, Isaac Boniuk, Fred Rose, Joel Jacobson, Miss Sandra Yablen, Melvin Brown, Miss Isabel Tanzman, Miss Marilyn Greenspan. Committee was Saul Offman and Jack Astroff, with Dr. Sidney Chernin, Mrs. I. Kenner, Jack Newman, Jack P. Rafuse and Dr. S. Kaplow.

Imagination Stretches Any Budget To Make A Cheerful Home

Transforming a rented, furnished apartment or summer home into a comfortable place to live, may not necessarily entail great expense or expenditure of energy for the young bride and groom. Here are some suggestions that, landlord permitting, may help to give a fresh, cool look to the décor:

Remove all heavy furniture, rugs and drapery as well as any unnecessary furnishings and ornaments. Leave the floor bare, or cover with scatter rugs or rattan mats. The floor could be painted a bright color with deck paint.

For color, think in terms of vivid shades, such as hot tangerine, sunflower yellow and Mediterranean blue. Color can enliven any rented home.

If furnishings are sparse or too hideous to live with, replace them with second-hand wicker or iron pieces, and splash these with color. Cushion furniture with cheery, chintz-covered pillows. Camouflage all "tacky", yet useful, objects. For example, cover worn outdoor or kitchen tables with red and white checked oilcloth. Beds and overstuffed sofas could be made decorative with a printed Indian bedspread covering; and chairs could be temporarily slip-covered with a wide floral print fabric, thrown over the chair like a dust sheet, and tucked in.

Hang inexpensive white curtains at the window, or use white shades as curtains. Graceful green ferns or over-sized flowers could be painted on the shades to add a bright touch. Colored fish net also makes a cool window treatment. It could be hung to hide irregularities in the walls, too.

Silver Flatware Will Be Enjoyed Forever With Easy, Daily Attention

For longer enjoyment, give silver the care it deserves. Experienced homemakers know that the secret of keeping flatware beautiful is to use it daily, at every meal, each piece in its turn. Frequent use, coupled with careful washing and thorough rinsing, will not harm your sterling — it will make it more beautiful as time goes by.

Wash one piece at a time and place a towel on the drainboard to prevent abrasion. Use hot soapy water and get all food particles and grease off with the aid of a soft brush. Rinse thoroughly: dried soap is a natural born lustre killer. Dry with a soft, clean towel. Never leave silver unwashed overnight. When tiny scratches develop, they multiply with use into a lustrous finish called "patina" — a warm, deep, surface mellowing.

Even silver that is used at every meal and well cared for needs polishing occasionally to enhance its beauty. Once a month should be often enough, but once a day won't hurt a thing — if the polishing is done right, with a soft tooth or nail brush and a hand-sized pad of clean flannel. A larger piece of flannel or other soft, dry cloth, or a high grade chamois skin completes the equipment outlay except for the polish itself. Dampen the cloth pad slightly and then put plenty of polish on it. Rub industriously until all discoloration is removed. If the pattern is slightly ornamented, scrub it thoroughly with the brush with plenty of polish on it. Then wash and rinse as suggested above, and polish dry with the flannel or chamois.

Common tarnish is silver sulphide. It can be remedied only by industrious polishing. Keep it off by keeping silver away from wood, rubber of all kinds, sooty atmosphere, burning gas or coal fumes, many types of paper and other bleached and dyed materials.

Dark egg stains can usually be removed by rubbing a little salt on the spot with the end of the finger, and then removing the salt immediately. The purplish gray film which perspiration from the hand leaves will yield easily to a soft cloth dipped in ammonia. Black spots caused by the prolonged action of salt on silver cannot be removed by home methods. For these stains and deep, rough scratches see your jeweller. He has the tools and know-how.

Many plastics, including some that are made into silverware trays, contain sulphur compounds that blacken silver. It should be kept in a soft flannel cloth roll with individual pockets for each piece; in a cloth-lined chest. Some buffets are equipped with special drawers similar to these chests. Any of these are made to hold silver correctly and to protect it from physical and chemical mischance. Putting each piece away with care will pay big dividends in luxurious beauty.

What To Look For In Fine, Home Furnishing

Furniture is a major investment and will contribute greatly to the appearance comfort of a home for many years. The bride and her husband-to-be should be aware of what good furniture is, and by knowing what to look for, the bride will make the most of her budget.

Furniture woods are carefully selected to fill the decorative as well as construction requirements of the individual piece. Cabinet woods for tables, chairs and case goods must hold up under weight, absorb shocks and be free from swelling, warping or splitting. Mahogany, walnut, maple, birch, cherry, oak and chestnut are most commonly used for these purposes.

Veneered furniture has a thin layer of finely finished wood firmly glued to the base wood. The woods used for veneer are chosen on the basis of beautiful grain and pattern, and include walnut and mahogany, as well as many imported woods.

Solid wood, the same piece of wood all the way through, is used for carved pieces as legs, posts, stretchers and other supporting members. Solid wood, although not as handsome as veneered, will take hard wear and long use and may easily be repaired or refinished.

The best type of finish brings out the grain and should have a glow from rubbing, not a harsh shine from varnish. Table tops should resist heat and stains.

Drawers of chests should fit into the frame without space or unevenness when closed. The backs and undersides of all furniture must be sanded, sealed and finished, to prevent warping and swelling. Each piece should be properly balanced and stand firmly and squarely on a level floor.

In upholstered furniture, construction features are mostly hidden, making it harder to judge the quality. The bride will have to depend on the reliability of the salespersons and the manufacturer to tell her what is underneath. The application of some practical and time-proven rules can create a truly beautiful first home, overcoming any decorating inexperience or budget limitations.

An over-all plan should encompasses furniture, fabric, carpeting and paint for the whole apartment. The bride should decide whether she wants modern or traditional furnishings; and of course, may choose different periods for different rooms, such as a modern living room and a French Provincial bedroom. A small apartment or house calls for an all-over color scheme, one linked from room to room, with a continuous flow the eye can follow pleasurably.

The bride's first purchase should be the floor covering, as this is not only a big investment but covers a large area, and there are limitations as to color selection. Next, decide on upholstery and drapery fabrics, correlating these to the carpet shades. When the room is completed, then the accessories, lamps, cushions, pictures, can be placed where needed.

How To Announce The Engagement

To announce the engagement, the family of the bride-to-be may choose to announce the engagement to their friends at a family dinner or party (sending engraved announcements is not correct), but in any case they will send an announcement to the newspapers. Ask the newspapers' society editor when this should reach them for it to appear at a certain time. Usually a paper will want this about three weeks in advance of release date, and a glossy picture of the bride-to-be one week in advance.

Many magazines and papers and some photographers have forms for recording her name, fiance's name, names and residences of both sets of parents, and background material on the young couple, such as schooling and clubs; and date of wedding. The society editors decide how much of this they can use, and edit the material to suit their papers; but to help them, here are some suggestions: type or print all the information.

If either parent is not living, be sure to include the name of the deceased, writing "the late" before it -- even if the living parent has remarried. Divorced parents should announce the engagement together, the mother's name preceding the father's. If the mother is a widow, her formal name is always her husband's full name. The bride-to-be must sign her name and include her telephone number. If her fiance is not from her town, ask his mother for a list of the newspapers to notify and send the story to them at the same time.

The Use Of Perfumes Among Ancient Jews

BY DR. NOAH SHAPIRO, OF TEL AVIV, ISRAEL

The history of perfume is as old as the history of man. Perfumes served for individual as well as for religious and secular purposes. The ingredients required for the perfumes were mostly imported, sometimes at great cost and personal risk. Little has been written about the Jewish aspect of them. Hebrew sources prove that our ancestors had also a predilection for them.

The vital necessity of perfume was expressed poignantly by the great Rabbi Judah Hanassi (The Prince), 150 years A.D.: "It is impossible to live without a tanner and perfumer. Happy is he who deals with perfumes." Perfumes were a symbol of purity to the Jews who were quite sensitive about ritual cleanliness and uncleanliness.

No people in ancient times was acquainted with alcohol as such and its solvent power of perfume-bearing substances. The peoples of antiquity employed the odoriferous resins in the form of mixtures with oil or as triturates with dry powders. Since soap was unknown, oil served for detergent purposes to clean off sweat and dirt; in early times odoriferous substances were added in massaging the body. In imperial Rome bath-houses had special massage rooms, and oil dealers — olearii — sold perfumed oils and unguents and gave massages. Women were the best customers. In Palestine the ancient Jews employed sheets dipped in old wine, clear water and balsam oil to wipe off their bodies, also complex ointments, as did the Athenian dandies.

Rabbi Huna, in the third century of the Common Era, said that after a meal people used to rub their hands with perfumed oil to disguise the odor of food particles clinging to them. Perfumed oil was also placed in lavatories. Women, as everywhere at that time, used to chew perfumed pills. Like others the Jews also perfumed their linen and clothes with odoriferous resins, especially for the holidays; burned spices were used at a later date. A perforated net, the cancellus, was employed in the process of perfuming the linen and clothes.

Wine used to be perfumed or spiced. This is the "Yein Rekah" or "Masakh" of the Bible. Wine spiced with galbanum was used as a tranquilizer and given to those condemned to death to lessen the agony of the execution.

Women took avidly to perfuming themselves. Rabbi Joshua bar Abin explained it as follows: "Man was created from the ground, but woman from man's flesh and bone. Flesh without salt decays within three days. Woman, too, must refresh herself." The true reason, however, was the libidinous one, to attract man. Besides the previously mentioned perfuming, women also carried aromatic substances and plants close to the bosom and around the neck, and placed myrrh and balsam in their shoes; when a young man approached, they stamped the ground and sprayed perfume.

Rather than forbid perfumes to a woman, the Mishna advised the husband to divorce a wife who flouted his wishes in this matter; for it held a woman could never do without perfumes. For the same reason, to arouse passion, the bride was perfumed before taking the marriage blessings. Ezra enjoined the merchants to look around in the towns to adorn their women, so as not to incur their husband's displeasure.

The perfumes were considered an urgent necessity for women and the sages of the Talmud searched for a course to obtain them, even while wandering in the desert. They came to the conclusion that perfumes and ointments fell down from heaven together with the manna.

How great was the use of perfumes by the Jewish women in the antiquity, we can see from the following story: When the daughter of the rich Jerusalemite Nakdimon ben Gurion was alloted 500 gold dinars for her perfume allowance and only got 400, she cursed the allotters; "May your own daughters receive such an inadequate allowance!" Unoffended they replied: "Amen!" In view of the fact that perfumes served erotic purposes, the Mishna forbade scholars to appear in public perfumed.

Because of the great pleasure derived from aromatic odors, perfumes were used on every festive occasion, and the heads and beards of guests were anointed with ointments. Guests at a meal were anointed, probably by pouring spiced oil on their heads. In Egypt this was performed by special anointer-slave girls. On festive occasions aromatic incense was burned in honor of the guests. In the Mishna period resins producing aromatic smoke were burned for the guests, upon their departure. At a later period burnt spice was placed in a special vessel to greet the arriving guests. Examples of those vessels were found in the excavations at Taanakh. Mourners were forbidden the use of spices and incense in their homes. Spices, however, were put into the tombs of kings and aristocrats. The bodies of the dead were anointed with perfumed oils, which are mentioned in the New Testament as well as in the works of Maimonides. The anointment of the dead was done to honor the departed souls; powers of preservation were at-

New Booklet Offers Fashion Do's And Don'ts For Trousseau Shopping

The trousseau that a bride takes with her to her new home is, literally translated from the French, a "bundle" she can carry. Practically translated into today's experience of limited storage space and limited budgets, bundle isn't a bad description.

To help brides make the most of their bundles, the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union has published a booklet titled, "Your Trousseau and How to Plan It." The booklet, which was written by Eleanor Lambert, fashion service director of the I.L.G.W.U.'s label department and Diana Callaway, is the second in a series of seven that the union is publishing as part of its community service Label Program.

It attacks the unwieldy and seemingly endless problem of a trousseau with succinct good sense, says the New York Herald Tribune, covering wedding fashions and clothes for the first two years of marriage.

The most frequently-asked questions of how much clothing should a prospective bride have and how long should she expect it to last, are answered with a well-thought out list and estimates of life expectancy. Sensible as the authors are, they don't neglect sentiment and advise brides-to-be to keep the dress they were wearing when they met their husband.

When it comes to the terrible moment of decision, when the bride is standing in a dress department trying to decide between a gay little print and citified black, the booklet has answers to give her confidence in her choice. First, she should think of what her husband likes. His suggestions will pay off in becomingness and suitability for the plain and simple reason that the things men like are nearly always essential to the well-planned wardrobe.

What men hate, implies the booklet, no one should have anyhow: like big, busy prints, embarrassingly low necklines, freakishly tall hats and evening skirts that get stepped on.

Then a bride ought to consider where she'll live. City wives must have suits, and assortment of coats, and dresses that will be cool on a hot street without being a low-cut sundress.

Pointing out the importance of climate and local custom, the booklet suggests that if she's moving to a city far away, it's a good idea to study the fashion and society pages of the city's newspapers. Then hang on to some money to spend after looking in person.

The booklet has the great good sense to remind the bride that how she and her husband will live should be faced realistically, and not covered over with a haze of romanticism. How much social life and what kind will their income permit? Will they be homebodies? What are the activities and income of her future husband's friends? If marrying "for poorer," don't overdress. If "for richer," then choose discreetly.

A chapter on the "Etiquette of the Wedding Dress", outlines what both the bride and groom should wear for four different kinds of weddings, and also gives a basic guide to what every one else in the wedding party should wear.

Looking ahead to the honeymoon wardrobe, the booklet has the frankest words yet published: "A bride is always noticed, but should not be noticed because her clothes are gaudy."

Arrange For Wedding Invitations In Good Time

Traditional invitations are on a white, ivory, or cream-colored double sheet of the finest-quality paper. The large size folded square with engraving on the top sheet is generally used for the more formal ceremony, a smaller size for less formal. Shaded Roman and English Script are among the most popular styles of engraving. Invitations to the wedding always "request the honour of your presence" and to the reception read "pleasure of your company." Tissues inserted by the printer to protect the engraving are left in.

While engraving is traditional, a form of raised printing or embossing that resembles engraving is sometimes used for formal invitations or announcements.

Order invitations from the jeweler, stationer or the stationery department in a store. They all have qualified consultants to guide in the correct wording, no matter how complicated.

In addressing the invitations, outer envelopes must be handwritten, never typed. Only full names are correct. Streets, cities and provinces should also be written without abbreviations.

The inner envelope, unsealed, is addressed to "Mr. and Mrs. Cohen" without first names or address. Children are not included in the invitations: a separate one is addressed to each or, when there are several, the first names may be written in one line: "Susan, Anna, Robert."

For an informal wedding including other than close friends and relatives among your guests, formal invitations are very much in order. However, at a small wedding where less than 50 guests have been invited, handwritten notes from the bride or her mother are acceptable.

For the remarriage of a divorcee, invitations and announcements are made by handwritten notes.

The Divine Marriage

heritage and awaken within her a consciousness of her moral responsibility. When the anniversary of her wedding day comes around, on Shavuoth, He reads to her once again in the Synagogue the stirring tale of Sinai and she stands in awe at the pronouncement of the Decalogue.

He engages a poet, the author of Akdomus, who declaims the glory and the strength of her Heavenly Spouse and regales her with the divine happiness she will find in the bosom of her life's companion. He has decked the fields with green and laden the trees with first-fruits and flowers to mark the occasion. Thus do we, on the Festival of the giving of the Law, renew our ancient pledge of loyalty to the Lord and of devotion to His teachings.

There is a great deal that the average man and woman can learn from this description of the Lord's love for His people. To enter into marriage means to make a solemn pledge of everlasting devotion and to live up to certain specific obligations. A marriage without a sense of obligation or commitment is meaningless. The partner who marries only in order to take and not to give, to derive benefits without making an investment of one's whole personality, will not achieve a happy marriage. For happiness in marriage does not simply "happen" as a matter of chance; it is achieved through sincere and earnest effort. And love means that one feels with all his or her heart that it is worthwhile to make this great investment of one's personal fortune for the sake of the beloved.

Just as the true lover is ever ready to give, so is he ready to forgive. He is ready to understand that his beloved's imperfect behaviour is not truly characteristic, that it probably is due to some emotional strain which is only temporary, that it is not serious enough to make him reject his beloved completely and irrevocably. He is willing to help his beloved make amends, and encourage her to reassert her better nature. In other words, he is not ready to dash all his dreams for genuine happiness in married life because of one or two mistakes of his partner.

All too often, have I found, couples are unwilling to give their marriage a real chance. At the first disagreement, they run to the divorce court and make it almost impossible to effect a reconciliation. The haste in which these marriages are repented of makes me feel that there was no true love in the first place, for if there had been true love there would have been patience and a serious attempt at understanding. On the other hand, there are young people who simply do not realize that they should not demand perfection, that their spouses are not angels, that marriage is not romantic illusion, that loved ones are subject to tensions, that husbands and wives are persons with human vanities and shortcomings, that the bad is oft outweighed by the greater good in us.

The love of the Lord for His people illumines another facet of human love; that love is not merely physical but spiritual as well. We know that physical attraction and the need for sexual expression is an important element in human marriage. But if that is the only element, then the marriage cannot long endure. Above and beyond physical intimacy there must be spiritual communion. There must be something else in marriage besides mere bodily gratification.

There must be community of interest, a sharing of ideals, a common purpose and striving. There must be not only a feeling of dedication and consecration to one's partner, but also a dedication to some higher purpose which encompasses and transcends both partners. The difficulty in many marriages today is the lack of idealism on the part of so many young people. If neither partner possesses any ideal, it cannot be shared with the spouse.

A married couple cannot shut themselves off from the rest of the world and live in complete isolation from society. Their love cannot find nourishment only from each other, it must also feed upon their common obligation to society. In Jewish terms, this means that husband and wife reinforce their bond of devotion to each other as they both are devoted to the future of Jewish life, to the building of a Jewish home, and the rearing of a conscientious Jewish generation.

"The day of the gladness of his heart is the building of the Holy Temple." Real gladness comes with the sharing of a real home, a home that is a sanctuary of love, a shrine of devotion. A home is the bower of intimacy, where lover and beloved can exclude the outside world for the moment and find themselves in each other's embrace. But a sanctuary implies reverence, where we may become familiar with the object of our devotion but not disrespectful. Regrettably, in some marriages the intimate physical relationship between husband and wife leads to the kind of familiarity that breeds contempt and a loss of respect for one's partner.

The intimacy of marriage, however, is no license to ride roughshod over the spouse's feelings and deprive him or her of dignity and personal privacy. In the Holy Temple there was an inner sanctuary which was entered but once a year, and then only by the High Priest. Thus was retained a sense of awe and mystery for the Lord above. In the same way, we must allow a margin of individual privacy for each partner in marriage, so that when they do approach each other it is with the sense that one is coming close to a profound and exalted personality. Mystery lends enchantment and enhances the exhilaration of physical communion.

Many books have been written in modern times about marriage. Marriage today is not so much an institution as a problem. Though it is true that marriage involves a specific relationship between two persons and that young people who enter upon marriage should have some idea of the specific situation thus created, we should not lose sight of the elementary fact that the best preparation for married life is the proper education of each individual for life in general.

Good persons make good partners in marriage; selfish persons make happy marriage extremely difficult for themselves and their spouses. We therefore must concentrate on the bringing up of honorable and responsible individuals. This is the Torah's greatest contribution to happy marriages. It does not train specifically for marriage, but its teachings serve as a guide in all paths of life.

Its spirit shapes a person's general outlook, its commands ensure the rightness of conduct everywhere. When a Jewish child is brought into the covenant of Abraham, we greet him with the most appropriate blessing: L'Torah, L'Chuppa, L'Maasim Tovim. Torah will confer upon him happiness in married life, and the love and esteem of all his neighbours.

tributed to it. Spices were also placed in the shrouds of the dead to dispel, as the Talmud explains, the evil smell of decay.

Like other nations, the Jews used to burn incense during funerals. Josephus relates that at the funeral procession of King Herod, each of the 500 descendants of the royal house carried incense. According to the Mishna, perfume was burnt under the beds of those who died of intestinal diseases; this was later extended to all who died. This may have been done also to banish evil spirits, a Babylonian superstition; but Hebrew writings do not bear this out. In Egypt a special priest burned incense for the dead. Embalming was practised in Assyria and Babylonia and in Rome, but there is no proof of such practice among the Jews.

Healing powers were attributed to perfumes and pleasant odors. Jeremiah speaks of the balm in Gilead for the healing of wounds. The Mishna praises the remedial quality of rose oil. The Tosephta permits the manipulation of aromatic trees to afford the inhalation of the aroma to the sick. A (warm) sheet could heal, oil of myrrh could cause hair to fall off. Girls used to summon the good spirits with perfumes and incense, as did the Greeks. But bad spirits fled when smoke was started under the body of a castrated animal. According to one legend, clouds of splendor filled with pleasant aromas guided the Israelites in the desert against evil spirits.

The Book Henoch which dates from the first century B.C. speaks of pleasant smells wafting from holy books. Rabbi Joseph ben Abin of the 4th century before the Common Era says of the Talmud that just as the world needs perfumes to live, so he needs the Talmud. The book of the Jubilees of the first century says that sacrifices were burnt not on plain wood, but on aromatic wood, and that the Temple was built by King Solomon of ginger wood. The Midrash and the Talmud speak of thieves exploiting spices for their purposes. The generation of the deluge used to bring balsam trees, rub

The Luggage Trousseau Deserves Care In Choice And Upkeep

A purchase, like luggage, is something, not replaced for years. These pieces should be the very best quality, to be useful on a plane, boat, train, and motor trips. Matching or coordinated pieces that are conservative and classic, are the best.

A good rule is to stick to nationally known manufacturers' names, for reliable workmanship and quality. Look for the combination of strength plus lightness; wellmade, strong metal hardware that will stay in alignment. See that the bags are neatly and cleanly finished with no loose or ragged edges. Make sure that the leather or fabric is evenly applied, and lies smoothly. This is also something to check on, when inspecting linings. A lining should be of good quality, whether it's rayon or cotton or plastic, and it should be color-matched or smartly contrasted to the outside of the bag. A very convenient arrangement is a zipper pocket lined with water-repellent plastic or fabric.

For long life, the bindings on bags should be strong hide or plastic, at least one and three quarters to two inches wide; and have generous, easy-to-grip leather or plastic handles. Such features as strong stitching, fortified corners, and cushion edges to protect bindings — all add years to the life of any luggage. Metal studs on the bottom of cases help to preserve the leather or fabric, keep it from getting damp or worn.

It is important to know, from the very beginning, how to care for luggage. They should be stored in a dry, cool place. Both heat and dampness are natural enemies to well-made luggage. Should the bags get wet, never dry them by the radiator. Overloading puts a bad strain on locks, and often results in knocking a bag out of shape.

It's a good idea to keep luggage clean, as it will not only look better, but last longer. First, clean with a damp cloth, and mild soap lather. Then rub with a dry, soft nap cloth, and, if leather, apply saddle soap lightly. When dry, remove excess soap and polish with a good, neutral wax.

them on stones, place them in dug-up earth, and then steal and rob. When the people of Zippori heard this story, there were three hundred instances of balsam being hidden in dug up ground on that night as an aid for stealing.

The ancient Jews loved perfumes and they even called their children by names borrowed from the world of aromatics, such as "Balsam," its derivatives and similar names. The Talmud by way of poetical interpretation tries to link the name Mordecai with myrrh as being derived from it. As to the preparation of the aromatics, balsams, and incense, the Hebrew sources tell us mostly about their use for religious purposes; for secular purposes the preparation could not have been very different. They first fragmented and ground up the raw solid substance with a mallet, called kurnuss. The grinding took place in a mortar of brass with a pestle of wood or stone. The quality of the end product depended on the fineness of the grind and also on the mortar itself.

Oil spiced with aromatic substances was prepared by straining the raw material into cold olive oil or by soaking and softening it first in water, and straining it later. Cheaper spiced oils were made by mixing oil-bearing seeds with balsam wood or odoriferous flowers. After the oil had been soaked in the aroma, the seeds were squeezed out. Time was an important factor — the longer the mixture was allowed to stand, the stronger the spice. The spicemaker sold it in his store which became the gathering place of town loafers. When customers came to buy spices these loafers enjoyed inhaling the pleasant odors, much as was done in Rome.

Incidentally, the spicemakers were banded together in a professional guild. In large cities these stores were concentrated in a special quarter. There was a spice market in Greece, as well as in old Babylon. In Biblical times the spiced oils were kept in earthern jars; in Mishna times — in flasks made of fine glass and stoppered with used warp threads tied up with threads. The spicemaker's profession was an honorable one among the ancient Jews, just as in Babylon, Egypt, and Greece. Among the Jews it was practised by learned men, for example Rabbi Judah, son of Isaiah, in the first half of the second century of the Common Era.

The spicemaker should be distinguished from the spice peddler. The latter went around from house to house in towns and villages offering his wares, mainly adornments and ointments. In the Bible nothing is said about the peddler's ways and social standing. In the Mishna and Talmud, on the other hand, a lot is said about him. He carried his wares in a basket hung on two hooks of a tall stick of cane, slung over his shoulders. He would announce his goods aloud and did not mind exaggerating about them. Hence he was commonly looked upon as a liar. He offered his customers samples of his ointments which he poured out through a funnel made of wood, metal, glass or bone, and that he stoppered at the bottom with his fingers. He poured in a bit of spiced wine, turned the funnel sideways and held it to his nose to smell. The funnel also served him as a measure.

As against the spicemaker whose trade was a respected one, the spice peddler was not accepted and people took a negative attitude to him, first because of his reprehensible trading methods; secondly, because his customers were mainly women and he was not careful about sexual decency. Quite often such a peddler would be beaten up by an enraged husband whose wife the peddler had seduced. Because of such conduct the peddlers were barred from becoming rulers and acting as priests.

The Hebrew sources furnish no details as to the prices of the perfumes, ointments, and the incense. But inasmuch as the vast majority of the raw materials for the perfumes were imported from distances and with great risk, we may assume that their prices were very high.

The use of wine in the grace after meals is traced back to the time when the angels were visiting Abraham to announce Sarah's pregnancy. They were supposed to have proclaimed grace after their meal, over wine, and then to have shared the wine with their hostess.

On Passover four glasses of wine were drunk "in order to heighten the joy of the festival." Indeed, a poor Israelite was commanded to consume his full quota of wine even if he had to obtain it through charity. By drinking the wine and observing the Seder, he was "publishing the miracle" — showing proper appreciation for the Divine redemption from slavery. Another reason given for drinking four cups was that the Exodus was supposed to have taken place in four stages.

The Talmudists, however, were undecided as to whether four or five cups were necessary for the Seder. As a compromise a fifth cup was left for Elijah. It was an old belief of the Jews that shortly before the coming of the Messiah, Elijah would solve all difficulties and doubts, and settle all confusions and differences of opinions. When a dispute arose and no decision could be made, it was customary to say, "it must be left for Elijah's decision." This compromise resolved the debate by leaving it, as it were, to Elijah.

It was commonly believed that Elijah would be the forerunner of the Messiah. Another reason, then, for leaving a cup of wine for Elijah is to give expression to the hope that the ultimate redemption of all men would come soon. Belief in the presence of Elijah on Passover eve gave the Jew hope in time of despair. It encouraged him to believe in and to continue the struggle for freedom in ages of slavery.

In the marriage ceremony, wine represents joy. Thus, the couple drink from one cup "as symbol of their marital union." The cup of wine also represents life. As they drink from one cup of wine, so shall they drink together as one from the cup of life, sharing the good and the misfortune that attends life.

If I should now be asked the significance of wine in Jewish life, I would not be taken aback. No longer do I take wine for granted. Indeed, I now drink wine with added pleasure, as ordained in our law and Scripture. For wine cheereth the heart of God and man.

MONTREAL IN MEMORIAM

BAKER: In loving memory of a dear son, Elie Baker, who passed away June 9, 1936. Deep in our hearts, never forgotten. Father, Mother, brothers and sisters-in-law, sister, nephews, and nieces.

This label tells you the whole story. It says that the soup inside the can is Heinz Vegetarian Vegetable Soup. Meaning, of course, a hearty, tasty vegetable soup. The label also says "vegetarian." A meaningful word, indeed! For this soup is made without meat or any meat ingredient whatsoever. It's strictly, strictly vegetarian. About all the label doesn't say is "how about some... tonight?" Well—how about it?

CLASS IN COOKERY

COCOA CHIFFON CAKE

three-quarters cup of boiling water
one and three-quarters cups sugar
a pinch of salt
eight eggs
one-quarter teaspoon red fruit colouring one-half cup of cocoa three teaspoons baking powder
one-half cup oil
one teaspoon vanilla
one-half teaspoon cream of tartar three-quarters cup orange juice
one and three-quarters cups cake flour

Mix the water and cocoa until smooth and let stand until cooled. Sift the dry ingredients in a bowl and make a well in them. Whip cream of tartar and egg whites until stiff. Mix the yolks, oil, juice, coloring, and vanilla together, and fold in with the whites. Put this mixture in the well of the dry ingredients and fold. Bake for fifty-five minutes at 325 degrees; and then for fifteen minutes at 350 degrees, in a slightly greased tube pan. Turn the cake over immediately after removing it from the oven. Let it stand until cool. Crushed walnuts may be added to the mixture for variety.

Mrs. Morris Knopman.
7 Watford Avenue, Toronto.

MARBLE CAKE

two cups cake flour
two and one-half teaspoons baking powder
one-half teaspoon salt
one and one-half squares unsweetened chocolate melted
one cup chopped coconut
one and one-half cups sugar three eggs
one teaspoon vanilla
three-quarters cup milk
two-thirds cup shortening

Cream shortening and sugar together. Add eggs one at a time, beating after each. Add cake flour, baking powder, and salt, which were sifted together twice, alternately with the milk. Add vanilla. Separate batter into two mixing bowls and add melted chocolate to one batter. Into a slightly greased, nine-inch tube pan, alternate the white with the chocolate batter, and in zig-zag pattern with a knife. Bake at 350 degrees for forty-five minutes.

Mrs. A. Trossman.

● FEDERATION ●

Of Jewish Community Services: Baron de Hirsch Institute and Jewish Child Welfare Bureau re-elected Max Pascal as president. Joe Caplan was elected chairman of the executive committee; S. J. Smiley, Max S. Kaufman, Q.C.; E. Michael Berger, vice-presidents; Dr. Harry Magder, honorary secretary, E. I. Roll, treasurer. The agency enters its 97th year of continued service. At the annual meeting at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel results of a year-long evaluation study by Harold Silver, of Detroit, Mich., and Morris Zelditch, of New York, of the agency's services to the expanding population of over 100,000 Jews were reported. It recommended that, with the Public assistance of city and Provincial authorities, the agency could transfer its case-load and concentrate on rehabilitation and prevention of family ills and difficulties. Already the agency has built up a large caseload of families and individuals who had not come to the agency, since they did not have economic problems, but other difficulties in inter-personal relationships. Plans are being made for a fee-charging program, in family casework counselling work with married and parent-child applicants; and adoption services; also service to elderly Jewish persons for other needs besides economic. The problems of modern living are such, Mr. Pascal pointed out, that there is a need for a community resource for individuals and families with developmental and other difficulties. The recent opening of a Group Foster Home Residence, the first of its kind in the city of Montreal, was announced. Six children under the care of paid staff foster parents are living together in a residence in order to facilitate their adjustment to family life so that such children will be enabled to move into more intimate private foster family life, or to return home, should their families respond to the agency's casework services, reunite and develop happier ways of living together. Other members of the board are: Stanley Abbey, Mrs. E. M. Berger, Bernard M. Bloomfield, Julius Briskin, Q. C.; Mrs. Gerald Bronfman, Rabbi Maurice S. Cohen, Mrs. Louis Dorsey, Albert Eaton, Seymour Elkin, Abe Feiner, Mrs. A. Fisher, Stanton Friedman, Mrs. L. I. Frohlich, Mrs. Victor Goldbloom, Roy Hoffman, Mrs. S. Jaffe, Mrs. Leon Levinson, Manuel Mendell, Q.C.; Reuben Ross, Jack Reitman, Manuel Straker, Max Wolofsky. David Weiss is the executive director of these agencies which are constituent societies of the Federation of Jewish Community Services, partners in the Combined Jewish Appeal.

Chiel, former leader of Winnipeg's Rosh Pina Congregation, received the degree of Doctor of Hebrew Letters at the commencement exercises of the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York where he has pursued advanced studies since assuming the pulpit at Genesis Hebrew Center, in Tuckahoe, N. Y. in 1957. His doctoral thesis, "Jews In Manitoba", is the outgrowth of original research which he did under the auspices of the Manitoba Historical Society from 1950 to 1957. Rabbi Chiel came to Winnipeg in 1949 to serve as director of Bnai Brith Hillel Foundation at the University of Manitoba. He established the Department of Judaic Studies there as its first head, as Assistant Professor. He became the founding rabbi of Rosh Pina Congregation and remained for five years. Rabbi Chiel has written for Canadian and American publications on Canadian Jewish history. His first volume, "Jewish Experiences In Early Manitoba", appeared in 1955. "Jews In Manitoba", a complete and definitive social history, has been accepted for publication by the University of Toronto Press and will appear in 1961.

● ZIONIST ORGANIZATION ●

Of Canada: The United Zionist Council has expanded its film department to enable Jewish organizations and schools to present more effective programs. The film library contains over 80 films portraying life in Israel and problems confronting the state. All the films are 16 mm. sound; some are in color. Running times vary between one hour and 10 minutes; most run for 20 minutes. Among the many 16 mm films newly acquired, is an hour-long British documentary, "Israel Rises". It traces the creation of Israel from the days of the Balfour Declaration. Other films feature immigrant absorption, building, agriculture, irrigation, industrialization. Israel news magazines are received every month, providing up-to-the-minute reports. The films are available for showing to groups and organizations, at no charge except shipping costs. Further information, from the film department, United Zionist Council of Canada, 2025 University Street, Montreal, P.Q.

● RABBINICAL COUNCIL ●

Rabbi Emanuel Rackman, president, of the Council which represents seven hundred and fifty Orthodox rabbis and serves a million congregants in the United States and Canada, announced the appointment of Rabbi Walter S. Wurzburger, leader of Shaarei Shomayim Synagogue, in Toronto, as chairman of the national convention at Ste. Agathe, Quebec. Rabbi Rackman also appointed two co-chairmen: Rabbi Mendell Lewittes, leader of Young Israel, of Montreal; and Rabbi Sidney Applebaum, leader of Congregation Beth Judah, in Brooklyn, N. Y. The convention will be held from June 27 throughout the entire week. Rabbi Wurzburger, a graduate of Yeshiva University, is president of the Toronto division of the Council. He received his doctorate at Harvard University, and is the author of "Rabbi Hayim of Volozin." He is well-known as a lecturer and writer and is active in communal, educational, and philanthropic organizations. The theme of the convention is "The Development Of The Religious Potential Of The Non-observant Jew In The United States." The convention will also discuss the concept of "The Religious Approach To Social Integration", the role of rabbis in public education, civic affairs, social action, and in the general Jewish and non-Jewish communal set-up; and such subjects as the place of Israel in the community of nations, the relations between Israel and American Jewry, and the status of Jewish scholarship in the United States to-day.

● PIONEER WOMEN ●

Gallia Club met at the home of Mrs. H. Weinstock, 22 Park Hill Road. The vice-chairman, Mrs. S. Einstoss, presided. A report was given on the bazaar; and a closing event was discussed. Mrs. S. Silverberg introduced and thanked the guest speaker, Dr. Shena Gimbert, of the Women's College Hospital.

● ZIONIST ORGANIZATION ●

Mannie Brown, chairman of the national Herzl centennial committee of the Organization, announced that with the current world-wide observance of Herzl Year, marking the 100th anniversary of the birth of Dr. Theodor Herzl, founder of Zionism, the Central Division, invites Jewish youth in Ontario to enter an essay competition to encourage study of the life and works of Herzl and an appreciation of their influence on the emergence of Israel. Among prizes offered are: first prize, Herzl medal and a choice of a four-day all-expense paid trip to Montreal to the national convention of the Zionist Organization, October 29 to November 1; or a cash prize of $100; or books of Jewish content to the value of $100. For rules of the competition get in touch with Zionist offices.

● CANADIAN FRIENDS ●

Of The Hebrew University Toronto Chapter: Arthur Minden, chairman, announced that the Lady Reading Club has once again made its annual grant of $150 towards the Law Faculty Library at the University of Jerusalem, and has also provided four $100 scholarship bursaries for students at the School of Law of the Hebrew University. The Club is made up of the wives of Jewish lawyers, and its major project in recent years has been to assist the Law School in Israel. The executive is: Mesdames I. Usprech, president; N. Cappe, C. Herlick, vice-presidents; S. Levitt, A. Strauss, M. Pomer, secretaries; H. Siegal, dues chairman; P. Shulman, treasurer, J. Newman, publicity.

● Benjamin Clodman, a member of the faculty of the Associated Hebrew Schools of Toronto, was named "Teacher of the Year", for all of America. Mr. and Mrs. Clodman flew to Atlantic City, N.J., where the award was officially conferred upon him by the American Association for Jewish Education. Mr. Clodman is a graduate of the Teachers' Seminary of Grodno, and began his teaching career in 1905 at the communal school in Voladovsk, a suburb of Zhitomir. He met his wife, Bertha, when they were teaching school near Kiev. In 1925 he accepted a teaching job in Toronto, where he has been teaching ever since, except for 1936-1943, when he taught in Ottawa. With a record of fifty-three years as a Jewish teacher, Benjamin Clodman is still actively engaged in his profession today, and he is universally regarded as one of the finest Jewish teachers in Canada. His text book on the teaching of Hebrew, entitled "Safa Brura", in two volumes, was published in Israel; also a book of plays and poems for the classroom. In 1953 Mr. Clodman published in Yiddish, a book of memoirs depicting life in the Jewish towns of Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Clodman live at 36 DeQuincy Boulevard. They have one son: Paul, 84 King High Avenue; three grandchildren, Joel, aged seven years; Judy, four; and Joy, two; children of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Clodman.

● HADASSAH ●

Rishon Chapter annual antique gift show had Mrs. George Cummings, 21 Gardiner Road, as convener, the committee being: Mesdames Alfred Glazier, Irving A. Granville, Joseph Sagman. This is the third year for the show. On display was the wedding veil of a Russian Czarina, once worn by the bride of Czar Nicholas I. It bears the coat of arms of the Imperial Russian family and has been on display at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York. Northern Chapter held the closing luncheon in the Pump Room of the Lord Simcoe Hotel. Mrs. Ralph Bogel, convener, was assisted by Mrs. B. Miller, co-convener. Mrs. Joseph Wolfman, president, presided. Mrs. Harry Moscoe is vice-president. The financial report was read by Mrs. Harry Korson, financial secretary.

Morry Wingold, 551 Vaste Drive, Toronto, is chairman of the campaign for the Associated Hebrew Schools of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. Wingold have four children, Sharon and Miriam, twins, aged seventeen; Evelyn, aged eleven; and Dale Jay, eight. Mr. Wingold is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Wingold, 316 Glengarry Avenue.

Harry Zifkin, 73 Roberts Drive, Toronto, was re-elected president of the Toronto Zionist Council for the second term. He is a member of the Royal Philatelic Society; of the American Association of Bio-Analysts, Canadian Society of Radiographers, and Biological Photographical Association. He is on the national executive of the Zionist Organization of Canada, and the national administrative Council; and is a past chairman in the promotion of Israel Trade and Commerce. Mr. and Mrs. Zifkin have two children, Anita, aged sixteen, and David, twelve. He is the son of Mrs. Rose Zifkin, 536 Coldstream Avenue, and the late Benjamin Zifkin. Committee chairmen elected are: Morley J. Pape, Miss Anne Brown, Mrs. Lily I. Sheriden-Sharon, Q.C.; Miss Mary Berrar, Julius Herman, Gordon Moodly, Mrs. Maurice A. Cheques were sent to the Mothers' and Babes' Rest Home; and to the Jewish Home for the Aged, for purchasing equipment; and financial help was given to two needy families.

● B'NAI BRITH ●

Sportsmen's Lodge: Rabbi David Monson, leader of Beth Sholom Synagogue, will be honoured at Maple Leaf Stadium on Tuesday, June 14, when the Lodge will present illuminated scrolls to outstanding members of the clergy from the Jewish, Protestant and Catholic faiths in recognition of their "giving leadership to the promotion of justice, amity, co-operation and understanding amongst all Canada's peoples." Presentation of the three awards will be made to Rabbi Monson, Rev. Noble Hatten, minister of Sherbourne United Church; and Father David Bauer, former assistant principal of St. Michael's College School, in a special ceremony during the intermission between games when the Toronto Maple Leaf baseball club meets the Havana Sugar Kings in a double-header. Proceeds of the sportsmen's night, sponsored by the Lodge, will be distributed to the Hospital for Sick Children, Catholic Youth Organization, Star Santa Claus Fund, and Canadian Council for Christians and Jews. Rabbi Monson was with the Canadian army as a chaplain in World War II. He is one of the founders of Northwestern General Hospital, of which he is honorary secretary. Rabbi Monson is a member of the Metropolitan Toronto Traffic Safety Council; Playground Committee of York Township; and Greater Toronto Blood Donor Service Committee of the Canadian Red Cross. He is chaplain for the Hebrew Club for the Blind; General Wingate Branch of the Canadian Legion; Herzl Zion Club; B'nai Zion Organization; and the Boy Scouts Association of the greater Toronto region. His efforts in the sale of Israel bonds have won for him a citation from the chief rabbi of Israel. The Bnai Brith Youth Organization of Montreal presented Rabbi Monson with an engraved plaque honouring him as a "distinguished alumnus of A.Z.A." Toronto Lodge 836 elected Manny Rotman as president; Marvin Simbrow, Aubrey Moses, vice-presidents; John J. Glass, chaplain; Jack D. Pearlstein, treasurer; Charles L. Rubens, recording secretary; Barney Kronis, warden; Harry Salutin, guardian; trustees: George Biro, Gordon Segall, C. Posen, Samuel Kronis, Jack Kreaden, Irving Kirsch.

The Divine Marriage

BY RABBI MENDELL LEWITTES, OF YOUNG ISRAEL SYNAGOGUE, IN MONTREAL

The ancient Hebrew prophets described the relationship between the Lord and the people of Israel as a marriage. He is wedded to His people; He is the groom and Israel is the bride. The terms of the marriage are spelled out by the prophet Hosea: "And I will betroth thee unto Me (He says to His people) forever; Yea, I will betroth thee unto Me in faithfulness; and thou shalt know the Lord." These are the terms, but the marriage itself is based upon love, a love that is best described by the love of a man for a woman. Thus saith the Lord: I remember for thee the affection of thy youth, the love of thine espousals," was the message given to the prophet Jeremiah.

Our Sages of old, the direct descendants of the prophets, elaborated upon that theme. In our Holy Writings they found a paean of love, the Song of Songs which is Solomon's, and declared it to be most holy, for it is the love story, the romance, between the Lord and Knesset Yisrael, the congregation of Israel. When the Song speaks of "The day of his espousals", that is, the day of the wedding, it refers to the day of the giving of The Torah at Sinai. (Mishna, Taanit 4:8). And when it speaks of "the day of the gladness of his heart", the day when the groom brings his bride into his home, it refers to the building of the Holy Temple.

These thoughts come to us on the occasion of the Holiday of Shavuoth, the season of the giving of the Torah. Thus this Festival is a wedding anniversary, when husband and wife indulge in sweet reminiscence of the courtship of their youth and reflect with poignant memory upon the pledges of love and devotion which they made to each other under the wedding canopy. This reflection serves a double purpose today, for each Jew and Jewess can think of two marriages: the personal marriage to the spouse and the people's marriage to the Lord above. And the one marriage can lead to a greater understanding of the other.

The marriage at Sinai came about because of a mutual pledge. Each party undertook, with solemn vow, certain obligations. Israel obligated itself to live in accord with the teaching of the Torah; the Lord obligated Himself to cherish Israel as His special treasure. Even more significant, each party proved willing to respect his pledge even if the other party failed to live up to his obligations.

The mutual trust in each other was so strong that each was prepared to look upon the partner's failure to abide by the covenant as a temporary backsliding, incapable of rendering the whole marriage worthless and futile. The Lord's faith in Israel was so profound, that He did not renounce Israel as His chosen one even after they had worshipped the golden calf. Israel, for its part, did not abandon its faith in the Lord of its fathers, even though it sometimes appeared that He had forgotten His beloved and abandoned her to a ruthless fate.

This mutual faith, this willingness to understand a beloved's weaknesses and to forgive, is true love. Love is the appreciation of the essential worth of the beloved; the insight to see his or her noble qualities despite the ignoble act which is committed because of trying circumstances. True love is not blind; it is not completely oblivious of the beloved's imperfections. On the contrary, it has penetrating awareness of the inherent beauty which lurks beneath a superficial blemish.

"I am black, but comely," says the beloved of the Song of Songs, the congregation of Israel. "Look not upon me that I am swarthy, for the sun hath tanned me." The Midrash interprets this as follows: "Though I am unseemly in conduct, I am comely in the conduct of my fathers; my swarthiness is not inherited, it is acquired." This is the Lord's recognition of Israel's inherent beauty of character, of the moral instruction she received from her forbears, of the noble traits of righteousness and loving kindness which are her religious heritage. If Israel has sinned it is a momentary forgetfulness occasioned by the trial of Exile; if the Lord's beloved has failed to measure up to standard, it is a temporary aberration caused by the unhealthy environment in which she is compelled to live.

Thus the Lord is not only patient when Israel sins; He strives, through the preachment of prophets or the chastisement of enemies, to restore to Israel her noble qualities, to remind her of her try to country, from city to city. He changed jobs, he changed names. But wherever he went he lived in constant terror of being killed.

"He probably saw assassins around every corner; he grew gaunt, nervous, and bald. He tried to shroud his life in modest obscurity. Eichmann had few acquaintances. Even with his Nazi friends he used a false name. He pretended he was Richard Krumey, one of his accomplices during the war. As the years rolled by, he began to cling more and more to the hope he would be forgotten. But his terror never really subsided."

The informants gave these additional details: The end of the trail came for Eichmann three weeks ago in a Buenos Aires suburb when he stepped off a bus in the early evening to walk home where his German-born wife and four children waited for him. A car darted out of traffic and screeched to a halt. Israeli secret agents dragged him inside.

He was living in a sprawling settlement near the International Airport. He was riding home in a dilapidated small bus jammed by commuters. Alarmed by his disappearance, his family checked hospitals and morgues. But they soon realized that he had at last been seized, and the family itself vanished underground. They did not know that six hours after his capture he was in an Israeli plane headed for Tel Aviv.

It appears that the hunt was on in grim earnest early in 1958. Eichmann came to Argentina from Spain in 1952, carrying with him documents attesting that he was a displaced person. They were issued by the Italian Red Cross through a Vatican relief agency. The first city Eichmann stopped in was Tucuman, in northwest Argentina, and he took a job with a German-Argentine survey concern under the name of Ricardo Clement.

Fearful of capture, he moved on to Brazil, where he worked on a ranch for a year. Under the name of Rudiger, he worked in Paraguay for a few months in 1954, says the New York Herald Tribune. But he came back to Argentina that year, apparently feeling safer under the dictatorial regime of President Juan D. Peron. When General Peron was ousted in 1955, Eichmann slipped into Bolivia.

Again in 1956 he was in Argentina, working first in Buenos Aires in a spare parts shop, then going into the interior to be a supervisor on a truck farm. Early in 1958 he moved back to Buenos Aires and found a job as an administrative clerk in a large automobile factory. That was his job when he was seized. Details are scantier about his life before he came to Latin America.

Israeli officials contend that he told them he was captured twice by the United States Army in 1945 but managed to escape, first posing as a German Air Force private and then as an army colonel.

The Sore Hearts Of Our Chinese Neighbours

The following appeared as a paid advertisement in the Toronto Globe And Mail and is printed here as unpaid matter:

THE CHINESE COMMUNITY CENTRE ASSOCIATION ASKS FAIR PLAY FOR A MINORITY GROUP

The Chinese Community Centre of Ontario, representing almost all Canadians of Chinese origin in the province, deplores the abuse of our good name through grossly untrue statements in the past week about illegal immigration, international smuggling, extortion and slavery in our Chinese communities.

We resent these extravagant statements which tend to implicate almost everyone in the Chinese-Canadian communities of Ontario in these alleged activities. This association asserts that it has no official knowledge or intimation whatsoever of such illegal activities.

We resent strongly the widespread raids by the RCMP into our houses and places of business. The unfortunate plight of a few individuals who were victimized by extortionists in Hong Kong does not justify the subjecting to this humiliation thousands of respectable and law-abiding citizens of Chinese origin in Canada.

We feel that such action is persecution of a minority group.

Typical of the wild accusations is that of "smuggling". There is no underground pipeline through which immigrants are smuggled into Canada. Any illegal immigrants would have come through the regular channels. The 23,000 Chinese who entered Canada since 1947 were processed through Canadian immigration civil and medical channels both in Canada and in Hong Kong. Each immigrant was subjected to long, extensive and thorough examinations and interrogations of a nature unparalleled in the immigration procedures of any other nation in the world, before an official visa was granted.

Our Association would be the first to deplore the shameful actions of extortionists who allegedly take advantage of political refugees from Communist China, people yearning to be re-united with their families in the free world. We believe that if such charges are proved, that extortionists have made fortunes from the plight of refugees, then the guilty parties should be punished severely.

We denounce the immigration laws which are discriminatory and which offer the opportunity to extortionists to take advantage of some hapless refugees.

Although we decry illegal methods of entry by anyone, we know, as do many European minority groups, the heartbreak of separated families, some of whose members must remain under the shadow of Communism.

We hope that the government will show compassion for the plight of any political refugees who might have come here illegally from China. Their motivation was a search for some land in which they could live in dignity and freedom, and an escape from fear.

WE TAKE PRIDE IN OUR LOYALTY TO CANADA

Canadians of Chinese origin fought in the Canadian armed forces during the Second World War. Members of our Association participated in Victory Loan drives.

We take pride in our community activities.
Canadians of Chinese origin have about the highest record of any group in contributing to charitable drives such as the Red Feather and Red Cross.

We take pride in our family responsibilities.
Canadians of Chinese origin have a tradition of respect and love for their families, and of looking after their needy, the sick and the aged by their own efforts.

We are proud of our respect for the law.
Canadians of Chinese origin have the lowest crime rate of any national group in Canada.

TO SUM UP...

WE DECLARE THAT THE ALLEGED FAULTS OF A FEW HAVE RESULTED IN THE ABUSE OF THOUSANDS OF LAW-ABIDING CITIZENS OF CHINESE ORIGIN BY RCMP RAIDS; AND BY A SMEAR AGAINST OUR ENTIRE COMMUNITY IN FICTITIOUS STORIES OF A 44 MILLION DOLLAR "SMUGGLING RING" AND OF "SLAVERY" IN OUR COMMUNITIES. WE REJECT THESE CANARDS OUTRIGHT.

SUCH ABUSE OF A MINORITY GROUP, IF IT CAN BE ALLOWED TO HAPPEN TO US, COULD HAPPEN TO ANY OR ALL OTHER GROUPS IN CANADA.

WE ASK FOR THE SUPPORT OF ALL FAIR - MINDED CITIZENS, OF ALL RACIAL AND ETHNIC GROUPS, IN ASKING THE GOVERNMENT TO STOP THIS ABUSE.
